POLICE PLAY BALL

The Waltham Free Press Tribune has the following interesting account of the ball game played last week Thursday in that city between teams from the police departments of Newton and Waltham:

Nine big, husky Newton policemen, after two weeks of the hardest kind of practice, came to Waltham yesterday afternoon, played ball with a team composed of Waltham's finest on the Bicycle Park playground and then went home in sorrow. A 21 to 13 win for Waltham in nine innings of what might possibly be called baseball tells the story of how the Waltham policemen accepted the challenge sent over by Newton's finest.

In the first inning did the Waltham bluecoats spring into the lead and they held it until the sixth, when the score was tied, 12 to 12. Then the Waltham policemen got busy and showed their Newton brothers something in the line of batting which made their heads swim. Seven runs were scored in one inning by Waltham, while Newton could only make one.

Reserve Officer Maines, who was in the box for Waltham, was a puzzle to the opposing coppers and he was only touched for six hits, and struck out 12 men, which isn't bad at all. With Officer Hannan, who did the throwing for the Garden City policemen, the story was a different one. Just 16 hits, five of them two baggers and one a triple, were batter out into the field by Waltham. Twelve men were retired on strikeouts by the Newton pitcher, however.

Officer Hartigan started in on the receiving end for the home team and did very well for six innings. Then he retired in favor of Officer Cloonan, who finished the game behind the bat.

Newton went to the bat first and Sartwell scored a run in the first inning. Before the Waltham policemen had been retired in the same inning they had sent five men across the plate, Mansfield, Maines, Cloonan, Donahue and Eastman scoring. Four more tallies came to Waltham in the second inning, while Newton was blanked. Waltham did not score again until the sixth. Newton put four over in the third, six more in the fourth and one in the fifth. Newton scored once again in the ninth, making a total of 13 runs.

Waltham made two in the seventh, and seven in the eighth, a total of 21.

Special Officer James Burgin, who played first on the Waltham team, was one of the shining stars of the game. He batted out two two-baggers and one three-bagger and two singles, out of six times at the bat. He had 10 putouts to his credit and made no errors. Officer Maines had four base hits, one putout, an assist and an error to his credit. Officer Hartigan got two singles, had five putouts, three assists and four errors.

The best players on the Newton nine were Officers Sartwell and Cronin. The former made 11 putouts and had one error. Officer Cronin had one base hit, two putouts, one assist and one error.

FINDS VALUABLE GEMS

A bag of gems valued at $3000 was returned last Friday to the owner who had not missed them until 24 hours after the time they were lost. The finder was Michael Donahue, who lives at the junction of Walnut and Homer streets, Newton Centre, and the owner of the jewels is Mrs. John Lee Connable of 371 Commonwealth avenue, Boston.

For several days Mrs. Connable had been the guest of her daughter, Mrs. Joseph F. Lancaster, of 47 Oxford road, Newton Centre. On Wednesday of last week she left the house shortly before 8 o'clock to catch a train and when a short distance on her journey dropped a small canvas bag containing her jewelry.

Donahue, who is a plumber, was passing through Oxford road shortly afterward and saw the bag lying in the dust. He picked it up and was surprised to find that it contained a gleaming necklace of diamonds, a diamond pin and several valuable rings. He at once took it to his employer, G. Wilbur Thompson of 80 Langley road, Newton Centre, and suggested that he keep it until the owner could be located. Mr. Thompson at once notified police headquarters and placed the bag in his safe.

When Mr. Lancaster notified the police he was overjoyed to learn that they had already been located. A trip to Mr. Thompson's place of business was made in Chief Mitchell's automobile and the gems turned over to the owner. Donahue was liberally rewarded by Mrs. Connable.

McKenney & Waterbury Co., 181 Franklin street, corner Congress, are offering some rare bargains in gas and electric table and floor lamps, from an assortment of over five hundred. An unusual opportunity for those in want of more light for their homes.

Reserve Officer Edmunds made a fine running catch of a high fly in the seventh inning. He sprinted 25 yards and managed to gather in the ball on the run; he didn't know at first that he had it in his hands, however. Officer Butler, who was out in right field for the Newton team, did an acrobatic stunt which brought out the applause of the spectators in the eighth inning. Officer Butler did a fast sprint after a high one and just as he was about to gather it in he stubbed his toe. He got the ball into his hands as he fell and went on his nose on the ground. When he got up he still held the ball.

Base sliding which might place Officer Cloonan in a class with Ty Cobb was shown by that officer in the sixth inning; he went from second to third and ended his run in a dive which would cause many a professional to blush in shame. And he was safe, too.

It is said that liquid refreshments in the form of tonic, provided by the Waltham policemen, was responsible for the defeat of the Garden City guardians. They consumed many bottles apiece of the beverage.

NEWTON FIELD DAY

Yes, it is to be a field day. All Newton and their families are expected to be present at the first annual field day given by the merchants of Newton at Riverside Recreation Grounds on Thursday, Aug. 11, starting at 2 p. m. It was the fortune of the committee to encounter only good will and friendship in their collection tour and the only thing they had to guard against was the fact that the business men of Newton proper were too apt to subscribe too much. Then, too, almost every drummer and all the drivers of the wholesalers who come into Newton wanted to be represented and the prizes show the diversity of the different dealers. At a meeting held in the Y. M. C. A. Wednesday evening a committee was appointed to take charge of the field day and when it was found that numbers of the clerks could not be present in the afternoon the hall and an orchestra were hired for the evening and dancing will be indulged in up to 11 p. m. by those who bear the mystic tag. In a number of cases the clerks could not speak for the proprietors on the matter of prizes generously donated sums of cash for the occasion. Tickets were given by one of the printing offices and it is hoped that at least nine-tenths of the business men of the square and the clerks will be present to make this, the first Merchants' Day, the biggest success of its kind ever held in Newton.

The list of prizes includes: Tomato catsup, coffee, cantelope, tobacco jars, jack knives, groceries, ham, bags of potatoes, sausages, meats and fish, shoes and tapping same, fancy cakes, pies, crackers, and the last prize, 10 minutes before the closing of the entries, being strong if nothing else, with two bushels of onions.

There will be a slow race, 100-yard dash, 220-yard run, a baseball game between the married and single men, and then, to cool off, prizes for high diving, short distance swimming, etc., in the pool at the grounds. Tickets without charge may be had by any bona fide Newton business man by applying to Mr. McPherson, physical director of the Y. M. C. A., or Mr. Dean, at the Graphic office. The tag admits to all free. Children half price. Let everybody come and make this the best half-holiday that the Newton merchants have ever had.

CITY HALL.

In order to satisfy the demands of many curious persons who have evinced interest in the reports that half the city laborers have been laid off because of lack of funds, Mayor Hatfield has prepared figures showing that out of 264 men 40 are laid off on alternate weeks, the men being taken from the list alphabetically. In the off week they are given employment on the Metropolitan water system through Newton Centre. In the fall the city will have to re-surface Commonwealth avenue where the state water main is now being laid and this will provide much extra work for the city laborers.

NORUMBEGA PARK.

A new musical comedy but one of a little different type in the long and merry list of Matthew Ott summer concoctions will come to Norumbega Park the week of Aug. 8 for presentation in the new open air theatre every afternoon and evening. Its title is "The Lady and the Prince" and those who have seen it at the other resorts declare that it is sure to hit Norumbega Park patrons as the best of all. One of the distinguishing peculiarities is that "The Lady and the Prince" has something of a clever story. The Curtis family is on the verge of starvation but at the critical moment Harriet Curtis prevails upon her daughter Marie to accept an offer of marriage from Solomon Pinkofski. In order to save her mother and herself from the hard roads of adversity she decides to marry Pinkofski, and then the fun begins. He proposes, they quarrel, she upbraids him and insults him and then leaves him. In the meantime Dudley Lenox, one of Pinkofski's employees, appears on the scene and out of revenge Pinkofski has him impersonate a nobleman and Lenox is presented as the Prince of Maravia. The complications grow thicker and thicker and the ludicrous situations are numerous. A clever company of comedians, singers, dancers and pretty girls keep the fun and interest incessant throughout. Among the favorites in the cast are Charles Morgan, Ralph Bold, Miss Melba Drake and Hazelle Lorraine.

NEW TAX RATE $18.60

The assessors announced the new tax rate for 1910 on Tuesday afternoon as $18.60 per $1000 valuation, an increase of 40 cents over the rate for 1909. The increase is caused by a loss of income thru the new corporation tax law and an increase in appropriations of over one hundred thousand dollars. The rate was expected to be much larger but the assessors have discovered $2,788,620 in new property, making a total valuation of $73,585,510, the personal property is valued at $21,381,910, an increase of $2,182,620, and the real estate at $52,203,600, an increase of $606,000.

The amounts to be raised by taxation total $2,389,962.68, as compared with $1,288,503 last year. The principal differences being as follows:

	1910.	1909.
State tax	$106,810	$91,755.00
Met. parks	38,293.62	36,326.15
Met. sewer	63,310.01	67,237.54
Grade crossings	10,463.23	10,655.05
County tax	74,076.16	78,615.54
City tax	1,255,000.23	1,248,982.90

There is a loss in estimated receipts of $50,000 and the cash on hand fell from $58,094.42 last year to $49,620.81.

A summary of the valuations by wards will be given next week.

GETHESEMANE COMMANDERY HONORED.

SURPRISED

Mr. and Mrs. William Leeman of Newton were greatly surprised last evening by a reception given them on the 25th anniversary of their wedding, which was arranged by their daughter, Miss Jane F. Leeman.

Music was furnished by Mrs. Lillian Wickens of Fort H. G. Wright, New York, and Miss Evelyn Snow of Woburn. A large number of friends from Wellesley, Somerville, West Roxbury, Woburn and the Newtons were present. They received many beautiful gifts and a collation was served during the later part of the evening.

Majestic Theatre—The management of the Majestic Theatre, Boston, is able to announce a special summer engagement of Henry W. Savage's best "Merry Widow" company at summer prices, beginning Monday, Aug. 8. This fascinating Viennese operetta, the greatest musical play of the generation, has not been seen in Boston since the original run of 30 weeks, and it is a great concession on the part of Mr. Savage, America's leading producer, that he is offering it at lower prices. The cast of the operetta for the coming run is the best that has ever appeared in it. It contains players who were in at least one of the original Boston, New York or Chicago runs. Mabel Wilber, now considered the best Sonia Mr. Savage has ever had, was in the New Amsterdam Theatre cast and has since been the "widow" in Mr. Savage's more important production touring the country. Robert E. Graham created the role of Popoff, the Moravian ambassador, in the original New Amsterdam Theatre production; Fred Frear was the original and laughable Nish; and Charles Meakins was promoted to the role of Prince Danilo during the New Amsterdam run. Harold Blake, F. J. McCarthy and numerous other originals are in the large company. With his usual liberality Mr. Savage has made an entirely new production with the latest Parisian gowns and millinery. Seats will be placed on sale Wednesday.

WILL VISIT NEWTON.

Next Thursday Mayor Hatfield will entertain members of the Massachusetts Highway Association on the occasion of the quarterly meeting and ladies' day of that organization. The invitation was extended by the Mayor and he has assisted in arranging the program for the day, together with Deputy Street Commissioner George E. Stuart, the president of the association.

The party will assemble in Nonantum square at 9:30 o'clock and will be met by 70 automobiles. These will include all the municipal machines and others loaned for the day by private citizens. Besides members of the Highway Association invitations have been extended to the Metropolitan Park Commission, the Middlesex county commissioners, Louis K.
Rourke, superintendent of streets of Boston, and the officials of Waltham, Brookline, Watertown and Wellesley.

In order to give the road makers an idea of the excellence of the thoroughfares in the section adjacent to Newton the route as mapped out will include the principal streets in Watertown, Waltham, Wellesley and Brookline. Many of these streets have been treated with the various preparations in use for laying dust and making up-to-date automobile highways and the trip will be an object lesson in modern road building.

At 1 o'clock the party will assemble for luncheon in the cafe at Norumbega Park and following this the guests will witness the matinee performance in the open-air theatre.

A BASEBALL FAN.

The Observant Citizen of the Boston Post had the following item recently:

Of all the ardent baseball fans who are present at the games day after day there is none more enthusiastic than Alderman Thomas J. Lyons of Newton. He has not missed a game at the American League grounds this season and his friends say that rather than be absent from one he would go without his dinner. Alderman Lyons has a pretty sound pair of lungs, and it has been said that he entertains the belief that his "rooting" alone has been responsible for the victory of the home team in many a close-fought contest. In several of the photographs of the baseball crowd taken for the newspapers Alderman Lyons' smiling visage appears in the foreground. His prediction is that the Red Sox will win the pennant.

A "Hoodoo" Buddha.

Lady Dorothy Nevill in her "Reminiscences" records an example of the so called "unintelligent influence" of an inanimate object upon the fortunes of its possessors similar to that said to have been exerted by the Hope diamond, now sunk beneath the waves. From the day a miniature Buddha from Burma of charming workmanship entered her home everything went amiss. Its installation in the drawing room "was followed by a perfect avalanche of catastrophes." Within a week a son failed in business. Household pets came to tragic ends. A favorite pony was suddenly paralyzed, "and this on the very eve of an election in which it was expected by conveying Conservative voters to the poll," from which it is inferred that the Buddha was not favorable to the Tory party. A few days later a neighboring chimney crashed down upon a wing of Lady Dorothy's house, doing much damage. Shortly afterward the Buddha was sent on loan to the Indian museum, where, after some minor disturbances, it settled quietly down and has since remained.

Postponed Her Bath.

Miss Flora Shaw as correspondent of the London Times was once traveling through Africa in a bullock wagon. The sun was blazing; the bullocks were slow; the dust was indescribable. She was making for a frontier town, where she anticipated the comforts of a bath. At the entrance to the place Miss Shaw, dead bent, dusty and irritable, found herself confronted with the order of a public reception. The officials read her a welcome. She was as civil as she could be. Then she bolted for the hotel. She gave but one order—"Hot water, quick!"

She sat on the edge of the bed and waited. Some minutes passed. At last a black servant entered with a tin vessel, in which there was something steaming. Seizing it, Miss Shaw poured out a milky, odoriferous liquid. She turned to the servant for an explanation.

The hotel was very short of water. As a distinguished guest a point had been stretched for her. They had sent her the water in which the fish had just been boiled!

The Victorious One.

An Indianapolis business man was marooned on election night in 1904 in an Illinois village, away the Saturday Evening Post. Naturally he was interested in the election. He wanted to find out whether Mr. Roosevelt or Mr. Parker had won. He began investigating and discovered that the telephone girl quit at 6 o'clock and that the telegraph agent at the station knocked off work after the evening train went through, which was rarely later than 6 p. m.

At 8 o'clock the landlord shut up the hotel, telling his guest to take the room at the head of the stairs where he was ready to go to bed. No news was to be had, and the business man went to bed, that being all he could do.

Next morning he was awakened by the heavy tread of boots on the plank sidewalk. He threw up the window and asked the passerby, "Say, who was elected?"

"I was, by heck," replied the man proudly. "Third term for constable."

He "Dassent."

The selection of the right word to convey one's meaning is sometimes more important than the rules of grammar. So it appeared to the bridge policeman, who is an alert sociological student. An east side resident of foreign birth was taken before the magistrate in one of the police courts charged with a trivial offense.

"Tell him he must not do it again. He is discharged," the magistrate said to the policeman on the bridge.

"The judge says you dassent do it," understood? "almost shouted the policeman to the prisoner.

"Hold on, officer; I didn't dare him to break the law again. I said 'must not.'"

"That's all right, your honor. He understands what I said better. He would want you said," explained the policeman. And the prisoner seemed to think so too.—New York Sun.

Riding Away With the Bride.

In many of the border counties of England the quaint old bridal customs of hundreds of years ago are still in vogue. The parents carefully abstain from appearing at the marriage ceremony, clinging to the idea that the bridegroom still rides away on a foaming steed with his bride behind him as in the good old days. The brides prefer the custom to the modern method of being given away at the altar in the orthodox fashion.

Wanted the Proof.

"You look sweet enough to kiss," says the impressed man.
"So many gentlemen tell me that," coyly answers the fair girl.
"Ah! That should make you happy."
"But they merely say that," she replies. "They merely tell me the facts in the case and never prove their statements."

He Got It.

Eva—As we strolled along he wagged a box of chocolates that I couldn't say the word "kiss." Bellinda—And did you try? Eva—Yes, but he took the word from my very lips.

A Big Shadow.

We are told that the "smallest hair throws a shadow." And so it does. It throws a shadow over your appetite when you find it in your food.—Exchange.

A good deed is never lost. He who sows courtesy reaps friendship, and he who plants kindness gathers love.

The first outing of the recently organized Newton High School Alumni Association will be held tomorrow at Bass Point, Nahant. The party will leave Boston on the 2:20 o'clock boat and on arriving there, the afternoon will be devoted to baseball and sports, after which dinner will be served and dancing enjoyed in the evening. President Frank L. Lewis is in charge.

POLICE NOTES.

Robert Williams, a negro, was arrested at 3 o'clock Monday morning while praying on the lawn of the Woodland Park Hotel. He was charged with vagrancy but gives evidence of an unsound mind. In a long speech to the court he admitted that he had been wandering around the city at unseemly hours and said that he could have procured work many times when he did not want it but that when he sought employment he could find none. Judge Kennedy ordered him committed to the state farm at Bridgewater.

$3,000,000 A SENSATION IN BOSTON

Boston has the pleasure of playing the first real musical comedy success of the new theatrical season. "Three Million Dollars" has opened at the Colonial Theatre and has given that city the honor of being the first to see the original 1910 musical comedy hit. The Colonial Theatre was crowded to the doors and the theatre was so cool that the audience was pleased and placed in good humor before the curtain rose. After the overture the theatregoers knew that they would have some new hunting melodies to hum and whistle for some time to come, such as "Little, Danc-ing, Jumping, Jigger," "Love Letters," "Havana Maid," "I'm Crazy to be Crazy Over Someone," "Girls, Girls, Keep Your Figure" and "Meet Me Down at Mammy Janny's Cabin Door" and they settled down and enjoyed themselves beyond all expectations. The cast of this big musical corporation contains over a hundred "Spend-thrifts." Mark Smith plays the hero's part and gets into numerous predicaments with artistic ridiculousness. Incidentally he sings a couple of songs in a pleasing voice, their sentimental nature being well set off by some clever work. Prominent among the other male parts are those of Louis A. Simon, as his much burdened valet, required to do everything from carrying trunks and a woman with a sprained ankle to falling into the creek to enable the hero to show his heroism, by rescuing him. Then there is George Lydecker, as the hero's friend, who won all the popularity the hero sought, and who sang well several times; George Barber, the hero's choleric and gouty uncle, and Arthur Conrad, a young love-sick character, are mixed into the plot. The feminine foreground was evenly divided between Juliet and May Boley. Juliet did some good work in singing and dancing as well as in general actions of the play, but her specialties were imitations of well known actors, including Maude Adams, James T. Powers and Harry Lauder, each bringing a salvo of applause. Miss Boley was cast as Mrs. Van Pelt, the chorus girl wife of a terrifying husband who turned out to be about three feet high, while her proportions are in marked contrast thereto. Her tenderloin antecedents were evidenced by her vocabulary of slang and her previous amorous affairs were continually arising to vex her. Whether she danced, talked or sang or acted, Miss Boley was entertaining. Miss Griswold portrayed the maiden aunt in outlandish garb and kittenish manners to perfection. Dorothy Bienen displayed winsomeness and pleasing voice in her numerous parts and songs, as the hotel keeper's daughter. Carolyn Gordon, Georgie Olp and Julia Pastman, as summer girl guests, and Frances Alain, as the lively chaperone of Mrs. Van Pelt, were among the other prominent figures in the cast. A big contrast was afforded by the ill-proportioned proportions of Hans Reed as Mr. Van Pelt, and Ben Corday as his chauffeur and as the hotel porter. The chorus of "Gilt Edged Heiresses," which is the appropriate title Charles Marks has given his "Handsomest ever seen chorus," contains the names of many well known and high salaried Broadway show girls, the most prominent being Sadie Carr, Harriet Barry, Lenna Duer, Browne Hall, Gertrude Tyson, Ruby Lewis, Anita McTavish, Sophie Ralph, Maude LeRoy, Martha Dean, Frankie Wilson, etc., etc. "Three Million Dollars" is undoubtedly the most pretentious production that Charles Marks has made and will have a prosperous run at the Colonial Theatre. Mail orders will be filled in the order of their receipt, and reservations made by telephone will hold until six of the night performance. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

MECHANICAL WONDERS.

It is confidently asserted by the management that the Mechanics' Exposition of 1910, to be held the entire month of October in the Mechanics' building on Huntington avenue, Boston, will be the greatest ever held in Boston. Mechanics' building, as is well known, is the largest permanent exposition building in America and the present indications are that it will be "jammed to the doors" with exhibits of all kinds, over 80 per cent of them to be of the practical working sort in full operation from 10 o'clock in the morning until 10 o'clock at night.

One of the most interesting and instructive of them will be that made by Thomas A. Edison, who has appropriated $10,000 to properly and artistically install his display. It will occupy all of the big stage in Grand Hall, all of the adjoining space on the floor in the immediate vicinity and all of the large rooms in the rear of the stage. An almost countless number of the fruits of the genius of this wizard of the scientific world will be most attractively shown. They will include the latest issue of the storage battery, that epoch-making marvel destined to revolutionize present methods of motor propulsion and the utilization of electricity in about every form requiring power in the field, in the home, in the shops, on the sea and under the sea in submarines, and in airships of all kinds. Columns could be written on this one feature of Mr. Edison's exhibit but there will be many others shown in this most interesting section of the Mechanics' Exposition. Among them illustrations of the methods employed in the casting and constructing of the famous cement houses made by Edison; the making of animated pictures in the natural colors, a discovery which will work wonders in the theatrical field; the automatic stenographer that is to have a tremendous influence in changing present methods in counting rooms, lawyers' offices and in the ordinary affairs of business and hundreds of other things which have to do with the economy of light, heat, power and sound in their relation to the progress and the comfort of humanity.

This Edison exhibit is only one of 200 to be seen in this great Mechanics' Exposition in October, a season of the year most propitious for excursions to Boston from all over New England and Canada. Thousands will surely attend every day to listen to the music, to see attractions and entertainments and study and enjoy the wonderful things to be seen on every hand. A most pleasing feature and one most satisfactory to the ladies will be the daily distribution of souvenirs.

"PARAGON PARK" AND PALM GARDEN.

First Half of Season Closes Demonstrates How This Resort Has Leaped to First Place.

Nothing has ever been known in the history of amusements in New England like the rise in popularity of "Paragon Park" and the Palm Garden at Nantasket. Statistics easily prove today that no single popular summer amusement enterprise on the New England coast stands so high in popular estimation as "Paragon Park" and its famous Palm Garden. But this is not an accident. It is the natural outgrowth of several seasons of toil and thought on the part of Manager Dodge, whose daily and nightly thought has been to gradually build up in "Paragon Park" a Mecca of festivity and recreation, coupled with the best of cuisine and service, in the Palm Garden ever offered in this part of the country. That he has accomplished this task is plainly proven by the tremendous daily crowds visiting this "city of festivity by the sea." The place is unique with its many attractions furnished in addition to the chief delight of dining in the Palm Garden while looking out over the lagoon, watching the brilliant electric illumination, the beautiful statuary electric fountain, seeing the several free circus acts, and hearing the splendidly rendered selections of the Martland Concert Band, and Szymanski's Viennese Orchestra, both assisted by Mlle. Desmond and the Paragon Male Quartet. Among the free circus sensations are La Diva Venus, Demon, Speedy, the Stanleys and Aroza, who makes balloon ascensions and triple parachute drops.

The special Wednesday and Saturday night features of fireworks displays continue to be great drawing cards.

Count the Times a Horse Rolls.

To see a horse when out at pasture rolling on the ground and endeavoring to turn over on his back is a common sight, but how many people have noticed that in doing this he observes an invariable rule? The rule is that he always rolls over either at the first or third attempt—never at the second—and more than three attempts are never made. In other words, if the horse succeeds in rolling over at the first try, well and good—that satisfies him. But if the first attempt is a failure the second one always is. Then he either rolls quite over at the third or gives it up. He never makes a fourth. If horses are rolling on sloping ground they usually roll uphill. This is more easy of explanation than the strange custom regulating the number of attempts. As to this no adequate reason has ever been offered. Will those ingenious people who tell us why a dog turns around before lying down and why ducks walk behind each other in a string instead of abreast explain why a horse never makes four attempts to roll over and never succeeds at the second?—Exchange.

Diseases of Fear.

If you are afflicted with an unreasonable fear of anything do not waste time being ashamed of yourself; hurry at once to a doctor, advises a writer in Success Magazine. A writer in the Dietetic and Hygienic Gazette has compiled a list of four diseases from which it appears that everything, from screaming at mice to being afraid to go home in the dark, is a well recognized mental ailment. The tramp is in reality a sufferer from ergophobia, or fear of work, often complicated with aquaphobia and snopophobia. Siderophobia and astrophobia cause timid ladies to go into the closet when it thunders and lightens. Any number of people have cat and dog phobias. Phantophobia is what you would have if you were afraid of your shadow, while an all around unqualified coward might be called a phantophobia. The list is long and includes every human weakness except the actress' horror of publicity.

A Useful Pest.

Despite the fact that the spider, next to the mouse, is most violently stimulating to feminine sensitiveness, it is an insect of a very good character. It feeds exclusively upon other freshly killed insects, and they are the kinds denounced by sanitary authorities, the housefly being its favorite quarry. Its service in reducing the numbers of this pest is considerable, because the spider is always busy, and he is present in countless numbers, says Leslie's Weekly. The reason why he is not more frequently seen is that he is retiring in his habits and shuns human society quite as much as that shuns him. He seldom bites anything but food, and even when in self defense he does assert himself the result is no worse than a mosquito bite or a bee sting. The touching story of "The Spider and the Fly" was evidently intended to invite sympathy for the fly.

Buttered Side Up.

One of the stories which Levi Hutchins, the old time clockmaker of Concord, N. H., delighted to tell related to the youth of Daniel Webster.

"One day," said the old man, "while I was taking breakfast at the tavern kept by Daniel's father, Daniel and his brother Ezekiel, who were little boys with dirty faces and snarly hair, came to the table and asked me for bread and butter. I complied with their request, little thinking that they would become very distinguished men. Daniel dropped his piece of bread on the sandy floor, and the buttered side, of course, was down. He looked at it a moment, then picked it up and showed it to me, saying: 'What a pity! Please give me a piece of bread buttered on both sides; then if I let it fall one of the buttered sides will be up.'"

Comets of the Past Century.

During the nineteenth century 235 new comets were discovered as against sixty-two in the eighteenth century. The nineteenth century also beheld a greater number of large and brilliant comets than did its predecessor. The finest of these were the comets of 1811, 1843, 1858, 1881 and 1882. In the year 1800 only one periodical comet was known, Halley's. Now many are known, of which at least seventeen have been seen at more than one return to perihelion.

Alabama's Capital.

When Alabama was a territory its capital was at St. Stephens, in Washington county. The convention that framed the constitution under which it was admitted into the Union was held in Huntsville, where the first legislature met in October, 1819, and the first governor was inaugurated. Cahaba became the seat of government in 1820. In 1825 the capital was removed to Tuscaloosa, and in 1846 it was again removed, this time to Montgomery.

Didn't Want to See Much.

"What are you wearing that monocle for?" asked the theatrical manager. "You paid to see the show?" "Yes," replied the young man, "but I can see all I want of this show with the monocle."—Yonkers Statesman.

Origin of Tory.

Sir Walter Scott's explanation of the origin of "tory" as "give me" is not quite the same as that of other inquirers. According to a high authority, the word is Irish for a "pursuer" and was at first given to moss troopers, who for their own villainous purposes pretended to be on the side of the crown and the constitution and the rights of property and in that disguise haunted the bogs of Ireland, robbing the inhabitants in the name of the king. About 1690 those who "contended for the extreme prerogatives of the crown" had this contemptuous term applied to them by their opponents, and thus we arrive at the meaning of today. Macaulay points out as a curious circumstance that "whig" and "tory" originally applied as a term of insult should so soon have been assumed with pride. An older circumstance is that two great English parties should have taken their titles the one from the bogs of Ireland and the other from the lowlands of Scotland.—London Times.

Gilbert Islands Tipple.

Nether tea nor coffee is drunk in the Gilbert Islands, but liquor named karafee, or toddy. It is the juice of the coconut tree, from which it is drawn daily at sunrise and sunset. To obtain it the natives climb up the tall trees and while extracting it keep up a constant yelling to let those below know that they are at work. The sap when fresh is a harmless and delicious beverage, but after it has been kept a day or two fermentation sets in and it becomes intoxicating. Karafee does not, however, fly to the head, but a man who drinks it to excess loses the control of his legs. However, when this befalls a native he has sense enough to remain indoors and shows his face to no one, for if his chief should ever hear of it he would be tried and sentenced to hard labor and a heavy fine. In former days a native found intoxicated was tied to a tree and received a hundred lashes, the blood fairly streaming down his back. Besides this, all his lands were confiscated to the king forever.

Didn't Call Him Names.

Mickey's mother visited a young schoolteacher on the east side the other day, says the New York Sun. As nearly as she could make out from the mother's spluttering the teacher had been calling Mickey "names" that no lady would use and no decent mother would stand for. The teacher thought hard, but could recollect no time when she had given way to an impulse to call Mickey dreadful names. "Sure but you did," insisted the mother. "I don't know what you meant by it, but scurvy elephant is no nice name to call a boy. That's what he said you called him—a scurvy elephant."

"Scurvy elephant! No," said the teacher in a relieved voice; "I didn't call Mike a scurvy elephant. I called him a disturbing element, and I reiterate my statement."

Mickey's mother went home partially satisfied, but not quite sure that the teacher hadn't been calling her names too.

To the Highest Bidder.

Even tobacco buyers have their troubles. One of them, who represents a New York house, met a Connecticut man who had sold his crop. The buyer was amazed at the price the man said he had received.

"You have been cheated," said he. "You are entitled to more money than that."

"Well," replied the farmer, "nothing has been paid to bind the bargain."

"Then I'll give you 5 cents more a pound and a bonus of $100 for the crop."

"Agreed," exclaimed the farmer, and he received a check for the full amount.

"Oh, by the way," observed the buyer, "who was my rival in this transaction?"

He was informed. "I might have known it," said he sadly. "That man is my partner."—New York Press.

The Code of Hammurabi.

The so called "code of Hammurabi" was brought to light during the excavations on the site of Babylon and is looked upon as being one of the very oldest if not the oldest of all known records. It is believed to be at least 1,000 years older than the Mosaic law. King Hammurabi reigned over Babylon about the year 2300 B. C. and the laws he inscribed on the clay tablets for the most part no doubt long antedate that time. The Mosaic law is supposed to have been given to Israel about 1200 B. C. and it would appear, therefore, that the Hammurabi code has the much greater antiquity.—New York American.

Witness My Hand.

In the early days only a few scholars knew how to write. It was then customary to sign a document by smearing the hand with ink and impressing it upon the paper, accompanied by the words, "Witness my hand." Afterward the seal was introduced as a substitute for the hand mark and was used with the words above quoted, the two forming the signature. This is the origin of the expression as used in modern documents.

The Nearest He Ever Came to It.

"Colonel," she asked, "have you ever been up in a balloon?" "No," he answered, "but I got to talking art to a Boston lady once, and she had me away up in the air inside of two minutes."—Exchange.

Persevering mediocrity is much more respectable and unspokeably more useful than talented inconsistency.—Hamilton.

ments to which admission fee is charged must be paid for at regular rates, 15 cents per line in the reading matter, or 25 cents per line in the advertising columns.The taxpayers of Newton are to be congratulated that in the face of a large increase in appropriations and a loss of $50,000 in our income, the new tax rate just issued from the assessor's office is but 40 cents increase over that of 1909.The figures show an increase in real estate values of over $600,000, which is about the average yearly increase. In personal property the assessors have done remarkably well, with an increase of over two millions, which is substantially larger than that of last year. And it is all the more remarkable when it is known that one million dollars was lost through the departure from the city of one gentleman who objected to his assessment of last year. Under all these circumstances, therefore, the increase of but 40 cents is a cause of great gratification.At the same time, the situation is so acute that our city fathers should be extremely cautious in making additional appropriations for city expenses. Any tax rate over $16 will not invite to our city new residents with personal property which we so much desire. Additional appropriations for schools, unnecessary concrete sidewalks and the like, should be carefully scrutinized for the next year at least.

MR. CHADWICK DEAD

Mr. N. Henry Chadwick of Newtonville, active in the building trade, died on Monday at Newbury, Vt., where he was spending a vacation.
He was 72 years of age. He was widely known because of buildings he had erected in Commonwealth avenue, Bay State road and elsewhere in the Back Bay section. Mr. Chadwick was born in Bradford, Vt., March 17, 1838, and was educated in the public schools of that place. For many years he had resided in Newtonville. He was a member of the Board of Aldermen for several years and in 1899 and 1900 he served as representative from his district in the Legislature. In the first year he was a member of the committee on cities and during his second year in the Legislature was a member of that committee and the committee on State House. Mr. Chadwick was a member of Dalhousie Lodge, A. F. and A. M., of Newton, and of the Sons of the American Revolution.He was also an active member of Central Church and was at one time one of its deacons. A widow and one daughter survive him.The remains were brought here and the funeral was held Wednesday afternoon from the family residence on

SUNDAY ON RIVER.

Large crowds and ideal weather,
without a single canoeing accident, were the features of Sunday on the Charles River. In the afternoon there was a band concert on Fox Island at Waltham and one of the largest gatherings of the season, both on the water and the shores, applauded popular and classical airs.At the Riverside recreation grounds a young boy who refused to give his name was seized by cramps while in the swimming pool. Other bathers noticed his condition and got him safely to the landing stage where he was given treatment and afterward was able to go to his home.On Roberts point, where a party of picnickers were spending the day, a bulldog and a setter engaged in a fierce fight. The setter was getting the worst of it when both dogs slipped on the steep bank and rolled into the river, where the setter, thoroughly at home, held his antagonist's head under water until he drowned.The Boston Y. M. C. A. held one of its regular open-air meetings in the theatre at Norumbega Park in the afternoon. There was a large attendance. Music was a special feature and the address was delivered by Fred L. Willis, general secretary of the Worcester branch of the association.

FIVE-CENT TRANSFERS.

Patrons of the lines of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Company, who for a year have been paying six cents when a transfer was asked for, have been somewhat surprised the past few days to find that transfers were being sold at the old rate of five cents. The reason is due to the delay in the hearing by the Board of Railroad Commissioners to the officials of the road on a petition to continue the six-cent rate for another year. The hearing will be granted on Monday, Aug. 8, and until the board returns its finding the five-cent rate will prevail.

Quiet and unassuming in manner, he always saw his duty as a citizen and a man and met it promptly and faithfully. In the church he was loyal and true and in business and public affairs he exerted a wide influence for good thru his unswerving integrity and solid common sense.

NEWTON MAN ARRESTED.

Ernest H. Meyer of Fisher avenue, Newton Highlands, was arrested Tuesday, charged with larceny of $513 from L. Sonneborn & Sons of Boston, of which firm he was the Boston manager. Meyer is said to have shipped oil to different persons without keeping any record of the sales. It is also claimed that he had reported to the home office that bills owed by the firm had been paid, when they were not. He was discharged last week Thursday. He was arraigned in the Boston Municipal Court and held in $1000 bail for a hearing on Aug. 11.

—Among the passengers arriving yesterday on the Camille were Mr. Albert G. Barber of Newton and Mr. Clinton L. Eddy and family of West Newton.

If you want to "get next" to nature's most fascinating land, take one of these trips at 10 a. m. any weekday (10:15 Sundays), and go up the cool and enchanting North Shore.

POOR WATER.

On account of the work of laying the new metropolitan water main in Commonwealth avenue, Newton Centre, the large 20-inch city water main in Centre street had to be relocated. The work of raising the city main over the metropolitan main was done last Friday night, but on account of the difficulty in breaking the water pipes, which had been laid 33 years, it was well into Saturday before the work was done. This work necessitated the deflection of the water supply into the smaller pipes in the side streets and the unusual amount of water tore loose the accumulation of rust and caused the water to be discolored, filled with sediment and unfit for general use for a day or two. The effect was particularly noticeable in the vicinity of Nonantum square and lasted several days. The supply is normal at the present time.

The Waiter's Tip.

"Splitting a five dollar bill with a waiter when you reach a hotel and promising him the other place when you leave if well served is a poor game," said a veteran waiter in one of New York's biggest hotels.

"A man tried it on me once, and it made me sore. I took pains to serve him poorly, showing that I did not care for his money. I was so careless that when he was leaving he refused me the other half. I had him sized up for a cheap skate, so I pointed out to him that the place he had was no good to him as it was and offered to buy it from him for $2. He thought deeply a minute and declined. Then I offered to sell my half for $3. Somehow or other this appealed to him, and he bought it and seemed happy. I'll bet he hasn't stopped figuring out yet whether he won or lost. One thing he's sure of—he didn't tip the waiter."—New York Sun.

Taught Him a Lesson.

"Why don't you give your wife an allowance?"

"I tried that once, and she spent it before I could borrow it back."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

It belongs to great men to have great Defects.

—French Proverb.

A Bernard Shaw Criticism.

Before fame came to him Bernard Shaw wrote dramatic criticisms for the London Saturday Review. The following sample is characteristic of the man:

"I am in a somewhat foolish position concerning a play at the Opera Comique, whither I was bidden this day week. For some reason I was not supplied with a program, so that I never learned the name of the play. At the end of the second act the play had advanced about as far as an ordinary dramatist would have brought it five minutes after the first rising of the curtain or, say, as far as Ibsen would have brought it ten years before that event. Taking advantage of the second interval to stroll out into the Strand for a little exercise, I unfortunately forgot all about my business and actually reached home before it occurred to me that I had not seen the end of the play. Under these circumstances it would ill become me to dogmatize on the merits of the work or its performance. I can only offer the management my apologies."—Everybody's.

An Obliging Father.

A man who grew rich and a son of whom he disapproved, and when the son was married against the father's wishes the father made him an allowance of $20 a week and said that was all he could have.

While later he was discussing the matter with a friend of his pioneer days, "Do you think $20 a week is enough for the boy?" he asked.

"Well," replied the friend judiciously, "I don't know about that."

"It's a darn sight more than we had when we started in," argued the father.

"Perhaps it is," said the friend, "but you must remember that times have changed. We used to dig claims for our dinner."

"By George," said the father, "I guess I have been too severe with him. I'll be kinder in the future. I'll buy him a spade and show him where the claims are."—Exchange.

His Conciliatory Way.

Mr. and Mrs. Pickaway, although really fond of each other, had frequent quarrels owing no doubt to infirmities of temper on the part of both. Mr. Pickaway was telling his troubles to his elderly maiden aunt.

"I try to be as good a husband to Bertha as I know how to be," he said, "but we don't seem to get along. It takes so little to irritate her, and when she starts to scolding she never knows when to stop. She takes offense, too, at such little things."

"Then don't say those little things," Joshua, said his aunt. "When she is cross you must try to be conciliatory."

"I am conciliatory, Aunt Betty," he answered. "I often say to her, 'Bertha, I know the utter uselessness of trying to reason with you, but will you listen to me just a minute?' and she gets mad even at that."—Youth's Companion.

They Like Fat Girls In Tunes.

A Tunisian girl has no chance of marriage unless she tips the scale at 200 pounds, and to that end she commences to fatten when she is fifteen years old. She takes aperients and eats a great deal of sweet stuff and leads a sedentary life to hasten the process. Up to fifteen she is very handsome, but at twenty what an immense, unwieldy mass of fat she becomes! She waddles, or, rather, undulates, along the street. Her costume is very picturesque, especially if she be of the richer class. She is clothed in fine silks of resplendent hues of a bright red, yellow or green and wears a sort of conical shaped headress, from which depends a loose white drapery Turkish trousers and dainty slippers, the heels of which barely reach the middle of the feet, complete the costume.

Evolution of the Apple.

Apples are new in the economy of the world's use and taste. At the beginning of the last century few varieties were known, and we can go back in history to a time when all apples were little, sour and pucker-crab apples and nothing else. The crab apple was and is in its wildness nothing but a rosebush. Away back in time the wild rose, with its pretty blossoms that turn to little red balls, apple flavored, and the thorny crab had the same grandmother.

A Curious Error.

The Rev. Dr. Edward Everett Hale told how a curious error crept into the translation of the Lord's Prayer into the Delaware Indian tongue. The English translator had as an assistant an Indian who knew English. "What is 'hallow' in Delaware?" asked the translator. The Indian thought he said "halloo" and gave him the equivalent. Therefore the Delaware version of the Lord's Prayer reads, "Our Father, who art in heaven, hallooed be thy name."

As Corrected.

"Tommy," said the teacher to a bright grammar class pupil, "correct the sentence 'I kissed Jennie two times.'"

"I kissed Jennie three times," replied Tommy proudly.—Chicago News.

His Ad. Answered.

A man stopped at a newspaper office on his way to the theater and placed an advertisement for a boy. Half an hour later one fell from the gallery into his lap.

Simple.

"How do you keep your razor sharp?"

"Easy enough. I hide it where my wife can't find it."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

THE EFFECT OF DIRTY MILK ON BABIES.

By John Lovett Morse, A. M., M. D.

Every one knows, in a general way, that the number of deaths in infancy is very large; that a very large proportion of the deaths are caused by the diarrheal diseases; that the vast majority of the deaths from the diarrheal diseases occur in the summer; and that many more bottle-fed than breast-fed babies die. Few realize, however, how terrible these figures are and to what they all point. The following are a few examples:

17,437 infants under one year of age died in Greater New York in 1907; that is, 15 out of every 100 died before they reached the end of the first year of life. 1315 babies died in London from June 1 to Nov. 30, 1907. The infantile death rate in Fall River at this time was 304.7 per thousand! The infantile mortality in Massachusetts, according to the census of 1900, was 177.8 per 1000 births. 740 of the 1315 babies dying in Boston from June 1 to Nov. 30, 1907, died of diseases of the gastro-intestinal tract. In New York in the five years, 1900 to 1904, only 23,330 children of all ages died of measles, scarlet fever, whooping cough, typhoid fever and diphtheria combined, while 26,563 babies under two years died of the diarrheal diseases during the same time.

4075 infants died in Munich in 1903; 83 per cent of these were artificially fed. Howarth found that less than 10 per cent of 43,000 infants dying in Derby, England, were breast fed. In Berlin, 1900 to 1904, only 9 per cent of the infant deaths were in the breast-fed, while in Paris only 9.2 per cent of the infant mortality is in the breast-fed. In an epidemic of autumnal cholera in Liverpool, 500 bottle-fed babies died against 20 breast-fed. In a series of 1943 fatal cases of diarrheal diseases in infancy in New York, only 3 per cent were breast-fed.

The much greater frequency of the diarrheal diseases and the deaths therefrom in the bottle-fed than in the breast-fed proves that the cause of these diseases must be sought in the food. The greater frequency of these diseases in the summer than at other seasons proves that something must happen to the food in the summer which happens very seldom, if at all, at other seasons. It is well known that the diarrheal diseases are caused by bacteria; that breast-milk contains practically no bacteria, while cows' milk, when it is taken by the baby, is usually swarming with bacteria; and that bacteria grow slowly or not at all in the cold while they multiply extremely when kept warm. It seems self-evident, then, that the diarrheal diseases in infancy are caused by bacteria that are taken in the milk, and that the greater frequency of these diseases in the summer is due to the greater number of bacteria in the milk at this season because of the great difficulty of keeping milk cool in hot weather. Further evidence in this connection is the universal experience that infants fed on clean milk, that is, milk containing but few bacteria, or on pasteurized or sterilized milk, in which the bacteria are killed, are, other things being equal, much less liable to the diarrheal diseases.

It seems evident, therefore, that our shockingly high infant mortality is due to a considerable extent to dirty milk, that is, to milk contaminated by bacteria. This portion of the infant mortality is to a large extent preventable and hence unnecessary. It is a disgrace to our civilization. It can be prevented in a great measure by proper regulation of the production, care and distribution of milk, especially during the summer months. How much can be done in this way is well shown by the marked diminution in the incidence of the diarrheal diseases and in the mortality from them in the babies that are fed on clean milk from the various hospitals and milk stations in Boston and other cities.

A word to the wise is sufficient.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre—Doctor Hermann, "the man who tamed electricity," will be the feature at Keith's next week, and while it is scientific in a way, Dr. Hermann's act is chiefly noted for its fun-making qualities. While he has on the stage an elaborate electrical apparatus, he does all sorts of amusing stunts. The amusing part of his act is where he gets a stage full of people and puts them through the most amusing stunts. All the hypnotists and mesmerists who have been on the stage are outdone by Dr. Hermann, and his engagement promises to be one of the events of the summer at Keith's. Another strong feature will be Angela Dolores, who will make her first appearance here in the delightful comedy called "Cupid at Home." Another new feature will be Sergeant Brennan, an English soldier who is the greatest master of diabolism who has ever come to this country. The Empire Comedy Four will also appear after an absence of several years in Europe, where they scored one of the biggest successes ever made by an American act. Other features of the bill will be Kaufman brothers, minstrels; Al Carleton, the monologist; Lee brothers and Allen in a unique dancing specialty, and Mr. and Mrs. Darrow with sand pictures and shadowgraphs.

American Music Hall—Clyde Fitch's biggest comedy success, "Girls," will be presented for the first time in Boston at the American Music Hall this coming week when the Lindsay Morrison stock company will offer a production that is guaranteed to be fully equal to the original. This is the same piece that ran for a whole year at Daly's Theatre in New York and has been pronounced one of the very best things that Mr. Fitch ever did. The theme deals with a woman who is a man hater and a man who is a woman hater and the funny situations which are brought about because of their attitudes toward the opposite sex are productive of a laugh about every second. Incidentally this piece will see the first appearance this summer in Boston of Miss Eleanor Gordon, who was Mr. Morrison's leading lady at the Boston Theatre two seasons ago. Miss Gordon was forced to come all the way from Los Angeles to accept this engagement and the fact that Mr. Morrison secured her at great expense both of salary and of travel, shows that he is determined to give his patrons nothing but the very best. All of the other favorites will be seen in the cast, including Wilson Melrose, Theodore Friebus, Mary Sanders, Rose Morrison, Katherine Clinton, Valarie Valaire, William Hasson, Edward Nannary and others. The usual custom of distributing chocolate bonbons on Monday matinee will be continued and the same low summer prices will prevail.

A GREAT SCHOOL SYSTEM.

An advertisement appears in this issue relating to the day-and evening schools operated by the Boston Young Men's Christian Association, and we take pleasure in explaining more in detail the work of this great school. The associations of North America have been foremost in establishing modern, progressive schools, which have become recognized as the leaders in many lines. Over 50,000 students have been enrolled the past year, representing all lines and grades of work. Boston is the acknowledged leader in this great system, last year enrolling 2300 students, employing over 100 instructors and occupying several buildings. The fire destroyed the central plant, but did not interfere with the technical work, day school or other features, as they were immediately re-located advantageously and proceeded with the work of the year.

The day school, established last year, was an instant success, and has won the cordial commendation of all who know about it. Small classes, male teachers, personal instruction, vocational training in many lines and intensive teaching have won a host of friends. One hundred and thirty boys were in attendance last year, many coming from suburban towns and cities.

The day school system includes a grammar school, from 9 a. m. to 2 p. m. daily; college preparatory school, day and evening sessions; technical school, day and evening sessions; school of commerce and finance, college grade, evening sessions only; evening law school, granting the degree of LL. B. and preparing completely for the Bar; automobile school, day and evening sessions; and two entirely new schools, co-operative engineering and co-operative business school.

These last schools are a combination of the store or factory and school, two boys being appointed to one position and alternating, one week in the school and one week employed. They are paid while at work and consequently are able to earn their tuition and many other expenses.

All of the courses are offered at a moderate rate, about one-third that charged by other high-grade schools, and with physical training, fine moral atmosphere, industrial training, shops, laboratories and other features. The work is most valuable and attractive.

Circulars may be obtained by writing to the associations as indicated in the accompanying advertisement.

SIX CENT TRANSFERS

The Board of Railroad Commissioners has approved the petition of the Middlesex & Boston Street Railway Co. for a continuation of the period during which an extra charge of one cent may be collected on its lines where a transfer is given. The order of the Railroad Commissioners to that effect was dated on Tuesday and extends the time for a further period of 12 months.

When the time for the privilege expired a few days ago, the company discontinued charging an extra penny for transfer fares, giving the transfers on a five cent fare, and the public had the benefit of the straight five cent fare for four days.

At the hearing on the petition for extension of time for the six cents transfer change, given by the Railroad Commissioners Monday, there were no remonstrants and the company secured the extension without any opposition.

Grand Opera House—Something quite a departure from the usual calibre of melodrama will be the attraction at the Grand Opera House next week in "The Shoemaker," in which will be seen Harry Fields, the popular character actor and comedian, in the role of a Hebrew mender and maker of shoes. Mr. Fields is one of the few exponents of a certain type of Jews who make their homes on the East Side of New York after coming to America from foreign shores. As a poor shoemaker who breaks none of the ten commandments because his nature will not permit him, Mr. Fields is said to have a role that fits his unique talents to a jot. There are numerous opportunities to over act the role, but Mr. Fields portrays him just as he is. In the play the scene shifts from New York to the West. Despite his new environment, Mr. Fields keeps within the picture of the type, sustaining all the vital elements of the man's nature until the final curtain. His love for his only child, his equanimity and self denial in the face of trouble, make a strong appeal to any heart. His humor and his pathos is as keen and infectious as the rays of the sun on a spring morn. Ably surrounded by a strong supporting company, an appropriate scenic investiture, plenty of bright lines and spirited action, the success of the play is as emphatic as it is lasting. Matinees will be given Tuesday, Thursday and Saturday.

PARAGON PARK AND PALM GARDEN.

Starting Sunday, Aug. 7, there will be just four weeks and one Sunday and a holiday more of the season at Paragon Park and its famous Palm Garden. In other words, Manager Dodge will follow his usual custom of closing the regular season of this immensely popular resort at the end of Labor Day, Sept. 5. It is possible that the Palm Garden may remain open after that date for the accommodation of automobilists who make this their favorite dining place when touring the South Shore. The dance pavilion, too, will doubtless remain open after the regular season has closed, but in the meantime there are practically just four weeks for the seekers of outdoor amusements to take advantage of the wonderful array of attractions and novelties which Manager Dodge provides. Among the special features next Sunday will be some remarkable balloon ascensions by Aroza, whom many considered the world's most daring aeronaut. His triple parachute drop is a sight long to be remembered. Beside this there will be seen in the list of free open-air circus acts, La Diva Venus, in her fancy diving and nautical feats in the Lagoon; Speedy on his world's highest dive in a shallow tank of water only four feet deep; Damon in his flaming slide for life from the top of the electric tower, hanging from an inclined wire by his teeth. These attractions continue all the coming week, with fireworks displays of great magnitude as special features for Wednesday and Saturday nights.

NORUMBEGA PARK.

A most imposing and brilliant array of vaudeville talent is offered by the management of Norumbega Park in the new open-air theatre for the coming week, beginning Monday, Aug. 15, for every afternoon and evening, as a fitting successor to the biggest hit of the season thus far, the musical comedy attraction, "The Lady and the Prince," which has filled the auditorium to overflowing at every performance the past week. If anything will fill the theatre as well as a musical comedy attraction this vaudeville program will. A leading feature will be Joe Hearn and Matt Rutter, who add to their refined singing repertoire novelty wooden shoe and grotesque soft shoe dancing. It is described as an exceptionally clever act. Another headline feature will be the Michael Richardini troupe who offer a number of surprising features. Old favorites at Norumbega who will be warmly welcomed are Lola Merrill and Frank Otto, in their pretty little playlet, "After the Shower." Miss Merrill has appeared rather conspicuously of late on the musical comedy stage, having been featured in Colman and Harnis' "The Honeymooners" and "The American Idea," and previous to that appeared with Sam Bernard in "The Rich Man's Hoggishness." Mr. Otto was a vaudeville favorite for seven years in the team of Carlin and Otto. A clever pair who made an exceptional hit last season, Katherine Nelson and Elizabeth Otto, will also be seen the coming week.

THE HORSE'S PRAYER

To thee, my Master, I offer my prayer: Feed me, water and care for me, and, when the day's work is done, provide me with shelter, a clean dry bed and a stall wide enough for me to lie down in comfort.

Always be kind to me. Talk to me. Your voice often means as much to me as the reins. Pet me sometimes, that I may serve you the more gladly and learn to love you. Do not jerk the reins, and do not whip me when going up hill. Never strike, beat or kick me when I do not understand what you want, but give me a chance to understand you. Watch me, and if I fall to do your bidding, see if something is not wrong with my harness or feet.

Do not check me so that I cannot have the free use of my head. If you insist that I wear blinders, so that I cannot see behind me as it was intended I should, I pray you be careful that the blinders stand well out from my eyes.

Do not overload me, or hitch me where water will drip on me. Keep me well shod. Examine my teeth when I do not eat, I may have an ulcerated tooth, and that, you know, is very painful. Do not tie my head in an unnatural position, or take away my best defence against flies and mosquitoes by cutting off my tail.

I cannot tell you when I am thirsty, so give me clean, cool water often. Save me, by all means in your power, from that fatal disease—the glanders. I cannot tell you in words when I am sick, so watch me, that by signs you may know my condition. Give me all possible shelter from the hot sun, and put a blanket on me, not when I am working but when I am standing in the cold. Never put a frosty bit in my mouth; first warm it by holding it a moment in your hands.

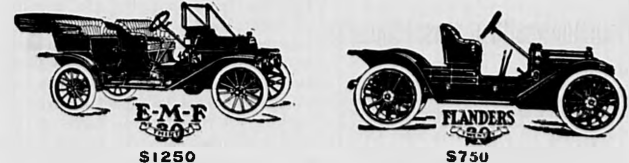

I try to carry you and your burdens without a murmur, and wait patiently for you long hours of the day or night. Without the power to choose my shoes or path, I sometimes fall on the hard pavements, which I have often prayed might not be of wood, but of such a nature as to give me a safe and sure footing. Remember that I must be ready at any moment to lose my life in your service.

And finally, O my Master, when my useful strength is gone, do not turn me out to starve or freeze, or sell me to some cruel owner to be slowly tortured and starved to death; but do thou, my Master, take my life in the kindest way, and your God will reward you here and hereafter. You will not consider me irreverent if I ask this in the name of Him who was born in a stable. Amen.

CITY AUDITOR OTIS DEAD

Mr. Benjamin F. Otis, city auditor of Newton for the past 34 years, died at his home on Elm street, West Newton, Wednesday morning about four o'clock, after a long illness affecting the heart and kidneys. Mr. Otis had been in poor health for the past two years but did not take to his bed until last March. The death of his wife a month ago seriously affected him and he did not long survive her. Mr. Otis was born in Worcester, January 17, 1827, and was 83 years of age. In early life he was engaged in the leather business in Worcester and for a few years in St. Louis. He served the city of Worcester in the state Legislature for two years, 1860-62, and was then employed in the Boston Custom House. He removed to Newton in 1867 and had lived in his present house on Elm street since that year. He re-entered the leather business about that time but was burned out by the Boston fire and then was chosen assistant to Julius L. Clarke, the first city clerk and auditor of Newton. On Jan. 17, 1876, he was elected city auditor and had held that office continuously until his death. Mr. Otis was a faithful and devoted member of the West Newton Unitarian Church and was its treasurer for over 25 years, retiring a few years ago on account of his age. He was greatly interested in all matters affecting that denomination and was a frequent delegate to its conventions. He was also a trustee of the West Newton Savings Bank. But it was in the City Hall that he was best known. There he was "Uncle Ben" to everyone who entered. With his wide acquaintance of prominent and influential men, formed by his long service for the city, his office was always sought by visitors, and his cheery greeting and cordial sympathy will be recalled by many friends. The flag on the City Hall at half-mast mutely expresses the grief which is felt at his death. He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Theodore A. Fleu, and a grand-daughter, Miss Ethel T. Fleu, who made their home with him. Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the West Newton Unitarian Church.

FIELD DAY.

The Odd Fellows of Massachusetts will hold a union field day at the Riverside Recreation Grounds next week Saturday beginning at 10 o'clock in the morning. The program includes all kinds of sports, swimming, dancing and fireworks in the evening and band concerts.

DIRECT NOMINATIONS IN MASSACHUSETTS.

Overs in New York state, former President Roosevelt and Governor Hughes have met defeat, temporarily at least. In their efforts to secure direct primaries. Here in Massachusetts, the people have the matter in their own hands so far as the nominations of state Senators and Representatives are concerned.

Chapter 520 of the Acts and Resolves of 1910 provides, in part, as follows: "In every district for the election of Senators or Representatives in the General Court wherein candidates are not now nominated by direct primaries by political parties of candidates for the office of Senator or Representative in this district be by direct plurality vote" shall, at the state election, be placed upon the official ballots in said district upon a petition signed by the registered voters therein in number equal to 10 per cent of the number of votes cast for Governor in the said district at the preceding annual state election. The signers of said petition shall add to their signatures their address, with street and number if any. The registrars of voters shall certify to the number, and the petition shall be filed with the secretary of the Commonwealth at least 60 days before the election at which the question is to be submitted. * * * If the vote is in the affirmative in any district, the nomination of candidate for Senator or Representative and, if in a senatorial district the election of a member of the state committee by all political parties in said district, shall thereafter be by direct plurality vote. There is also provision for repealing direct nominations at any time by the same method.

The present prospects are that the people who believe in direct nominations will be caught "napping." The petitions must be filed by Sept. 8, which means there are only about five weeks left in which to do the necessary work. Of course, unless repealed, the same provisions will hold good next year, but that means postponing direct nominations another 12 months.

During the first half of the year the majority of newspapers in Massachusetts were editorially advocating direct nominations, but it was not expected that a bill would pass the Legislature without a desperate attempt being made to defeat it by the Republican machine. When the Walker direct nomination bill was passed practically unanimously by both branches, we were so astonished that we had to gasp for breath. The Walker bill is what is known as Chapter 520 of the Acts and Resolves of 1910.

The time for taking advantage of this act is ripe, but, strange to say, no one is talking about direct nominations for the state of New York. What is the attitude of the newspapers that a few months ago were so anxious that we should abolish the convention system and have direct primaries? Have you read in any of them this warning that in order to accomplish anything this year action must be taken within the next five weeks?

Nearly every state Senator and Representative voted for the Walker bill. How many of them are circulating petitions or endeavoring to have the question go on the ballot in their own district? Doubtless there are a few, but the large majority are keeping as quiet about it as they know how, hoping that the eighth of September will slide past before the people in their district are aware of the opportunity. This is especially true in certain districts where there is an agreement that each city or town shall have the nomination for a fixed period of time.

Is not this apathy on the part of newspapers and individuals an explanation of the reason why the Walker bill met with practically no opposition? Is it not possible that the "machine" thought the electorate was so little used to such privileges that it would not take advantage of the opportunity offered, and furthermore is it not true that unless some of the newspapers and interesting citizens get busy within the next few days the wisdom of the machine's reasoning will be sustained? One thing is certain, and that is that unless somebody does get busy, there will be a large amount of speechmaking in next year's Legislature to the effect that the voters of Massachusetts do not desire direct nominations.

If you are desirous of securing a referendum on the question in your district, you can secure the necessary petitions by making application to the secretary of the Commonwealth. Upon request, he will also inform you as to the exact number of signatures required for the petition in your district.—Lynn W. Granger in Boston Common.

Circumspect.

A very circumspect and conscientious young miss of four was sent into the parlor of a certain Philadelphia household to entertain a caller for a few minutes until her mother should appear.

The conversation drifted to a discussion of the youngster's intellectual attainments, and the visitor asked: "Do you know the alphabet, Marie?"

"Yes, ma'am."

"Will you say it for me?"

Marie began glibly enough, but after she had given three or four letters she stopped short, saying, "If you please, ma'am, I don't think I better say any more."

"And why not?" asked the caller, surprised.

"Those are not all I know," explained the youngster; "but, you know, mamma says I mustn't tell all I know!"

Marble Polishing.

Marble polishing is simple and quickly done. The cakes are carried from the sawing room and placed on a lat revolving iron table. The iron brushes off the rough particles on the surface, and the operation takes about five minutes. Then the slab is attacked by a man with an emery wheel. Three grades of emery are used, and it's only about a minute to each grade. Next come three doses of felt, each time the felt growing finer in grade. The felt is attached in a layer to a flat wheel, spun by electricity, and as it turns you can see the marble begin to sparkle. The finishing touches are put on with the use of a fine felt rub, oxalic acid and oxide of zinc. The operator simply smears the surface with the mixture, gives a couple of minutes' vigorous turn of the wheel, and the slab then goes to the packer.—New York Press.

Field and Nye.

Eugene Field was a great lover of old books and quite a collector of them. His means were not adequate to his desires, however, and one of the quaintest proofs of this was a slip of paper found by a purchaser of an old volume in Field's handwriting, evidently an impromptu verse:

Kind friend, for goodness' sake forbear
To buy the book thou findest here,
For when I do obtain the self
I mean to buy the book myself.

Another bit of rhyme which is thoroughly American is in the preface to one of Bill Nye's books. It runs:

Go, little booklet, go,
Hearing an honored name,
Till everywhere that you have went They're glad that you have came.

Castor Oil.

The castor bean is a native of India. The United States produces most of the conifer kind of oil, while all the finest comes from Italy. Common castor oil is of an ugly greenish tinge and has to be allowed to stand in the sun to bleach, but the Italian article is beautifully clear when first cold drawn. Cold drawn oil is the best. It is got by crushing the fresh seeds between steel rollers. The castor oil plant can be grown in England, but there it is an annual. In southern Italy it becomes a tree twenty feet high and strong enough for a child to climb up into it.

Very Like a Bull.

The head of the house had been ill for many months and had lost his appetite.

"I can't seem to fix anything that he'll enjoy, and he hardly eats anything," the mistress was saying to the maid, who was a new arrival from the old country.

"That's always the way," returned the girl. "They're all the same, them invalids. All they want is nothing at all, and then when you bring it to them they don't eat it."—Exchange.

Like Stealing the Money.

First Artist—A Mr. Struckoyle offered Dobley a hundred pounds for that picture yesterday. Second Artist—And didn't he grab it? First Artist—No; he said he wanted time to consider. Second Artist—Poor fool, to let his conscience trouble him like that!—London Scraps.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre—Rose Pitonof, the 15-year-old girl who accomplished the hitherto impossible feat of swimming from Charlestown bridge to Boston light last Sunday afternoon, will be the principal feature at Keith's Theatre next week. Little Miss Pitonof is a typical water sprite, she can do every kind of dive that ever was shown, and besides that will demonstrate for the first time in public the famous "Pitonof Kick," by which she was enabled to make the record swim. Miss Pitonof does not swim like anybody else. She has learned to use only certain parts of the body, so that she swims with less exertion and therefore has a greater endurance. Just how she does this will be shown so that all swimmers can take advantage of the "Pitonof Kick." There will be two other women on the bill who have been very much in the public eye in the past year or so. Mrs. Ginnert, who started the investigation which resulted in the arrest of Dr. Crippen for the murder of his wife, will appear in "The Horse Stealer," of which her husband, Fred Ginnert, is the owner, and on the same program will be Mrs. W. E. Annis, the killing of whose husband by Captain Peter C. Hains was the sensation of the year. Mrs. Annis is an accomplished musician, and since the death of her husband has been at the head of a splendid company with which she will appear at Keith's. "The Horse Stealer" is an English act and will prove a decided novelty on this side of the water. It is a comedy sketch in which four horses play the principal parts in the most amusing manner. Other features will be Gaston and D'Amand, the well known comedy stars; Weston and Lynch, who are also better known in the musical comedy field; Ward, Klare and Ward, in comedy; and Vittoria and George, the only performers in the world who do all their stunts with their feet up.

Colonial Theatre—"Three Million Dollars" will stay in Boston two weeks more than originally planned. The big musical corporation that Charles Marks is entertaining Boston with at the comfortable Colonial Theatre was only booked until Aug. 13, but owing to the large patronage and demand for seats it will remain until Saturday, Aug. 27. After New York city will claim it for the winter. It is a remarkable fact that the success or failure of a show is known in 24 hours time. Sometimes, as was the case of "Three Million Dollars," there is an instinctive knowledge of a success. At the opening on Aug. 1, the house was packed to the doors and standing room only has been the result at every performance. One reason for its success is the fact that it is so different from the usual musical comedy that has been seen in the past. The public are always willing to patronize a play that gives them originality. Not alone is this true of the book, but also of the lyrics. As to the music, it is without doubt the best score that has been heard in a long time. All Boston is humming and whistling its irresistible melodies. Never has a theatregoing public heard so many good melodies as those that ripple through "Three Million Dollars." They probably are on your piano, and if not be sure to get "Meet Me Down at Mammy Jinn's," "When You Give a Girl Bombs," "Swinging with Someone," "Little Dancing Jumping Jigger," "Bill-of-Fare" and "Girls, Girls, Keep Your Figure." Prominent in the "Firm of Splend-thrifts" in this big musical corporation are Juliet and her wonderful imitations; Louis A. Simon, with that excruciatingly funny saying, "Is there any other little thing I can do for you?" Mark Smith, as the hero who must find a wife in two hours or lose

"Three Million"; May Boley and her new slang; George Lydecken, Dorothy Brenner, Arthur Conrad, Frances Elain, George Barber, Grace Griswold, Julia Eastman, George Olin, Carolyn Gordon and 80 others, including the "Handsomest even seen" chorus appropriately named the "Gilt Edged Heiresses" because they have such a wonderful wealth of beauty. "Three Million Dollars" is in three acts, without doubt the most spectacular sets of scenery seen here in a long time. The costumes alone are said to have cost over $20,000. Do not fail to secure your seats early for this "big fun show," which will pay you a laughing dividend on your investment at least once a minute. Matinees Wednesday and Saturday.

Majestic Theatre—Henry W. Savage's production of "The Merry Widow," that wonderful Viennese operetta which revolutionized the musical stage of this country, opened a summer season at the Majestic Theatre, Boston, last Monday night to a packed house. The life of the merry comedy with its alluring music seems unending and this particular production of Mr. Savage's is if anything more nearly perfect than that of the memorable run at the Tremont Theatre two seasons ago. The cast now appearing is equally as good as before. If not superior. Mabel Wilber, a Brookline girl, is the fascinating Sonia. She is remarkably good looking, has an excellent voice, is possessed of genuine dramatic talent and dances as only a Sonia should. Charles Meakins was the Prince Danilo. His excellent dancing and singing and his particularly manly grace and thorough masculinity won him immediate favor; that which is rarely given to the dainty matinee idol who sometimes is assigned a part of this kind. The old favorite, Robert E. Graham, hero of "The Little Tycoon" and "Florodora" and the creator of the part of Baron Popoff in the original New York production of "The Merry Widow," is again playing the part, and Boston thoroughly enjoyed his rich comedy. Fred Frear, another original of the New York company, is in his part of Nish again. Altogether it is a splendid organization and one worthy of the Savage trade mark, as well as the traditions which are fast surrounding this musical operetta. "The Merry Widow" will continue at the Majestic Theatre for some weeks, reaping again the harvest, best described as "Standing Room Only."

American Music Hall—Being firmly convinced from previous experiences both this season and last season that Boston theatregoers are particularly fond of rural plays, Manager Lindsay Morrison of the American Music Hall has decided to present next week the greatest play of them all, "Quincy Adams Sawyer." This piece last season broke all summer stock records both as regards the length of time it ran and also the amount of money it played to. It was not, however, wholly the idea of its money value that induced Manager Morrison to produce it again, but so many requests from his patrons have poured in during the past few weeks for its repetition that there seemed no other course left open. The beautiful love story which runs through "Quincy Adams Sawyer" is interwoven with the most delightful rural comedy of the type that will make the play live forever. Mr. Morrison's stock company is ideally fitted to give a great presentation of "Quincy Adams Sawyer." All the favorites will be in the cast and the original scenery and properties used in the original production at the Boston Theatre will be staged. Miss Eleanor Gordon, who made her season's debut this week, will be seen in the leading female role of Alice, the blind girl, and as far as possible all the characters will be portrayed by the same players who appeared in them last season. Monday matinee the usual distribution of chocolate bon-bons will take place and there will be no increase in the popular scale of prices.

Bloodhounds to Halt an Uprising.
Storm swept Jamaica was in 1738 the scene of a rising of the negro plantation slaves. At first there were brushes between the soldiers of the island garrison and the insurgents and lives were lost on both sides. Then the commander, General Walpole, be thought him of having 100 dogs trained to track slaves brought from Cuba. These powerful and savage brutes, misnamed bloodhounds, were really of the mastiff tribe, says the London Chronicle. After being muzzled they were led to the position taken up by the malcontents. General Walpole sent a message to the slaves threatening to unmuzzle and unleash the animals if they did not surrender. The negroes, who had shown themselves to be by no means afraid of the bullets of the military, were now mad with terror. They threw down their arms and gave in. Remarks a contemporary historian of Jamaica, "It is pleasing to observe that not a drop of blood was spilled after the dogs arrived in the island."

Finding His Bride.

In one part of the canton of Ticino, in Switzerland, a very quaint marriage ceremony prevails. The bridegroom dresses in his "Sunday best" and, accompanied by as many friends and relatives as he can muster for the fete, goes to claim his bride. Finding the door locked, he demands admittance. The inmates ask him his business, and in reply he solicits the hand of his chosen maiden. If his answer be deemed satisfactory he is successively introduced to a number of waitresses and maids, some perhaps deformed and others old and ugly. Then he is presented to some large dolls, all of which he rejects with scorn, amid general merriment. The bewildered bridegroom, whose impetuosity and temper are now sorely tried, is then informed that his bride is absent and invited in to see for himself. He rushes into the house and searches from room to room until he finds her in her bridal dress ready to go to church. Then are his troubles over and his state as a benedict assured.

He Was Relieved.

The other day a person dropped down in an apoplectic fit immediately in front of a police station and was carried inside. A moment after a woman forced her way in through the crowd gathered around the door, exclaiming:

"My husband! My poor husband! Clear the way and let him in!" She then busied herself by taking off the man's cravat and performing other little offices until a surgeon arrived, when the patient gradually recovered his senses. On this the sergeant in charge observed that it was a happy relief for his distressed wife as well as for himself.

"My wife!" exclaimed the man. "Why, I am a bachelor!" On seeking for the woman it was found that she had disappeared and with her the watch and purse of the patient, which she had adroitly abstracted under the very eyes of the police.—London Tit-Bits.

A Touch of Nature.

He was the worst boy in school; she was the teacher. She was angered by his stubbornness; he was defiant. She took him to the hall for punishment. Angriest she administered the penalty, and then somehow a great wave of pity for the boy swept over her. She looked at the worn coat of the little fellow. She thought of the frail body deprived of nourishing food. She thought of the hard and loveless home and of the starved soul of the poor kid.

Tears sprang to the teacher's eyes as the boy waited for further punishment. Then he saw the tears. His own eyes grew moist and overflowed. Thinking of how the poor boy had no chance, in an impulse of love she put her arms around the boy, and they cried together.

That is religion.
She and the boy both found it.—Morrill (Kan.) News.

To Make a Glass Cutter.

A glass cutter can easily be made with an ordinary mapping pen and a small piece of carborundum or carbide of silicon. Cut off a part of the nib to form a small tube. Fit a crystal or part of one of carborundum into the tube, take it out again and dip one end in cement and replace it. Next wind a piece of fine wire tightly around the tube and part of the handle and fix it in a notch cut in the latter. Put it aside for a day to allow the cement to harden. A glass cutter made thus will do its work as well as the expensive diamond and a great deal better than the ordinary wheel cutter.

Why He Is Disappointed.

"I am disappointed," said the doctor, "if I don't make a hundred dollars a day."
"Oh, come off!" they cried. "What are you giving us? You know you never make a hundred dollars a day."
"I know it," he assented plaintively, "and so I'm always disappointed."

Story of Lady Hamilton.

The story of Amy Lyon, the daughter of the humble Cheshire village, who by her wondrous beauty rose to a pitch of European renown, is an astonishing instance of beauty's power. The future Lady Hamilton was christened Amy, but after trying the various changes of Amyly, Emly and Emily finally adopted Emma and, wishing also a change of surname, christened herself Huri when at sixteen she came to London as lady's maid. After an extraordinary career of vicissitudes she came under the protection of the Hon. Charles Greville, who introduced her to Romney, who was inspired by her loveliness to paint from her some of his finest pictures. She also sat to Reynolds, Hopper and Lawrence and to numerous artists in Italy when at twenty-eight she had become the wife of the ambassador at Naples, Sir William Hamilton. There she met Nelson, and thereafter her history is intertwined with his own. She was obliged at fifty to flee from her creditors to Calvi, where she died in 1815.—London Strand Magazine.

Waco and Arkansas.

Every town has a right to pronounce its name in its own way, but Texans never seemed to get together on the pronunciation of the name "Waco." Years ago Texas was represented by two senators, one of whom called the town "Way-ko," whereas the other insisted it was "Wack-ko." The reading clerks had a merry time. If the word were read one way the opposing senator would make a complaint, and vice versa.

It recalls the time when Arkansas was represented in the senate by Garland and Walker. One insisted that the state should be called "Arkansas," just as it is spelled. The other always insisted upon "Arkansaw." John J. Ingalls, who was presiding officer of the senate in those days, had the matter down to such a nicety that he would recognize the one as "the senator from 'Arkansas'" and the other as "the senator from 'Arkansaw,'" being very careful to give each senator his favorite pronunciation.—Washington Cor. St. Louis Star.

Opened His Eyes.

The dapper little traveling man glanced at the menu and then looked at the pretty waitress. "Nice day, little one," he began.

"Yes, it is," she answered, "and so was yesterday, and my name is Ella. And I know I'm a little peach and have pretty blue eyes, and I've been here quite awhile and like the place, and I don't think I'm too nice a girl to be working in a hotel. If I did I'd quit my job. And my wages are satisfactory, and I don't know if there is a show or a dance in town tonight, and if there is I shall not go with you, and I'm from the country, and I'm a respectable girl, and my brother is cook in this hotel, and he weighs 200 pounds, and last week he wiped up this dining room floor with a fresh fifty dollar a month traveling man who tried to flirt with me. Now, what'll you have?"

The dapper little traveling man said he was not very hungry and a cup of coffee and some hot cakes would do.—Exchange.

Lord Southey's Guillotine.

The most eccentric action of an eccentric man was Lord Southey's cool arrangement for suicide by means of a guillotine. He had a magnificent one erected in the drawing room of his house in the Rue du Luxembourg at Paris. The machine was of ebony inlaid with gold and silver, the framework carved with artistic skill; the knife, sharp as a razor, was of polished and ornamented steel. Preparing for death, his lordship had his hair cut close, and, clothed in a robe of white silk, he knelt upon the platform under the knife before a mirror and pressed the spring which should release the knife. But the spring failed to work, and the would be suicide decided to give the guillotine to a museum instead of making a second attempt to end his life. It is said that he made an annual pilgrimage to see the guillotine until the end of his life.

How the Chinese Preserve Grapes.

To preserve grapes the Chinese cut a circular piece out of a ripe pumpkin or gourd, making an aperture large enough to admit the hand. The interior is cleaned out, the grapes placed inside and the cover replaced and pressed in firmly. The pumpkins are then put in a cool place, and the grapes retain their freshness for a long time. Careful selection of the pumpkin is requisite, the common field pumpkin, however, being well adapted for the purpose.

Quits Willing to Migrate.

A traveler passing through a fever infected locality said to an Irish resident:

"Put, I'm surprised that you stay in a place where people die so thick and fast."
"Faith," rejoined Pat, "if you'll be after tellin' me as a place where people never die off I'll move there to-morrow an' end me days."

To many, many friends the death of City Auditor Otis is a personal loss.
Emerson says, "To have a friend, you must be a friend," and gauged by that high standard, Mr. Otis was a past master in the art of making friends.
As long as most of us can recall he has always been the patriarch of City Hall, where he was affectionately called "Uncle Ben" by everyone. We shall miss his cheery, hearty greeting and the cordial manner with which he would grasp your hand with both of his and give it a loving pat.
We shall miss his genial sympathy and constant good nature, but the loving remembrance of his simply kind life will help us all to be better men and women. As one friend has said so well: "If every man, woman and child to whom he has given a kind word, a cheering hand grasp, a smile of greeting were to bring a flower to his grave, how deep it would be smothered with blossoms." Dear old Uncle Ben.

The visit of the Massachusetts Highway Association to this city was marked by a significant statement from the former chairman of the Massachusetts Highway Commission to the effect that notwithstanding the enormous advance made by the entire state in the quality of its road building, Newton still stood at the head.

MAN HURT.

John Murphy and owned by W. H.
Mague O.C. was struck by a Waltham street car on Washington street, West Newton. Murphy was thrown off the team and injured in the back, arm and head. He was taken to the Newton Hospital in the police ambulance.

"HIGHWAYMEN" IN NEWTON

ENTERTAINED AT LUNCH BY MAYOR HATFIELD

Washington street in the vicinity of the gas office was a busy place yesterday morning when over 60 automobiles gathered there to accommodate over 250 members of the Massa-chusetta Highway Association and their ladies. The affair was in charge of Deputy Street Commissioner Geo.
E. Stuart of Newton, president of the association, and Mr. John M. McCarthy, secretary. The party started about 10 o'clock and passed thru Centre, Ward streets, Waverley avenue, Washington street, Elmhurst road, Hunnewell avenue, Washington and Centre streets to the Watertown line.
Here Superintendent of Street Maloney took charge and piloted the autos thru the best streets of that town to the Waldham line. Superintendent R. A. Jones then took the lead thru that city until the Newton line was reached on Lexington street.
Thru Lexington and Grove streets, Woodland road and Washington street
a rapid run was made to Wellesley, where Superintendent Brown took charge. The route here led thru the college grounds and about the beautiful Hunnewell estate until at South Natick a loop was made around the tree where John Elliot is said to have preached to the Indians, and the entire line had an opportunity to review itself. Reaching Newton Lower Falls again, the route was thru Washington, Beacon, Chestnut, Woodward, Lincoln, Walnut streets, Lake avenue, Crystal, Beacon street, around the Newton Centre station, Langley road, Summer, Willow, Centre streets, Commonwealth avenue, Hammond street to Brookline. A long ride followed thru beautiful Brookline and Boston with a loop around the Chestnut Hill Reservoir which showed the party at its best. A quick run thru Comm-wealth avenue brought a hungry crowd to Norumbega Park, where lunch was served by Caterer Osgood.
The menu was as follows:

Consomme Jardiniere	Celery
Olives	Filet de Sole
Pommes Froides	Croutons
Green Peas a la creme	Tenderloin of Beef
Stuffed Tomatoes Robespierre	Harlequin Ice Cream
Pancake	Crackers
Roquefort Cheese	Demitasse

President Stuart was toastmaster and seated at the head table with him were Mayor Hatfield of Newton, Mayor Walker of Waltham, Hon. Harold Parker and Col. W. D. Sohler of the Massachusetts Highway Commission, Lewis R. Spear, president of the American Automobile Association;
Representative T. W. White, Judge
John C. Kennedy, County Commissioner Levi S. Gould, Aldermen T. F.
Lyons and T. J. Sullivan, G. Fred
Simpson, Joseph B. Simpson, P. A.
Murray, James Fortesque, Hon. W. E.
McClintock, P. S. Parker, G. A. Sweetser, F. E. Wing and Secretary Mc-Carthy.

Mayor Hatfield, the first speaker, was greeted with three cheers and a tiger. Mr. Hatfield welcomed the party to the city, good naturedly calling them "highwaymen." He believed that good roads made good citizens and good citizens mean good state, city and national government.
He spoke of the value of the good roads to the laboring man with his bicycle and to the farmer for his markets. He stated that good roads conserved the energy of man and thereby added to the wealth of the state. He spoke of the dust laying problem and declared that the most annoying part of his duties were caused by complaints of this nature. In closing after stating his belief that road builders were not only saviors of life but were prolongers of life, the Mayor gave a toast to the ladies.

Mr. McClintock said that two years ago when he left the highway work no one would have believed the changes since made to have been possible. A trip on Cape Cod which took two days at the beginning of the state road work, he had done the other day in five hours. Sixteen years ago, he declared, Newton had the best roads in the state and while at the present time many other cities and towns stood where Newton did then, this city was still far in the lead.

Mr. Harold Parker, calling Mayor
Hatfield a Machavellian statesman, proposed him and Mayor Walker for members in the association and they were unanimously elected. Other speakers were Mr. L. R. Spear, Mayor Walker of Waltham and Superintendent of Streets Louis K.
Rourke of Boston.

At the conclusion of the dinner the entire party attended the performance at the open-air theatre.

The trip was ostensibly to inspect the different methods of dust laying, but the rain of the early morning had effectually laid the dust so that there was no comparison. There were learned discussions, however, in the different machines over the respective merits of asphalt, dust, oil, and Spear's road builder, Spear's emulsion, Tarvia B. liquid asphalt, emul-sified oil and Tarvia A. To the ordinary traveler the rapidity of the trip, the good roads and the fine scenery were entertainment enough and it was well that the party were accompanied by the members of the Highway Commission as a trip of 52 miles in about three hours caused frequent bursts of speed above the legal limit.

Among the Newton people present were noticed Aldermen Blakemore, Higgins, Woods, Cox, Sullivan, Lyons, Moore, Barker, Heard and Towle, Ac-tial Auditor C. L. Hatch, Chief Milchell, Chief Randall, Assessors L. E.

Term opens

Boston, Mass.
GEORGE W. CHADWICK, Director

No school in this country can contribute as much toward a musical education as the New England Conservatory of Music. A steady growth of over fifty years has made it rich in experience, and it is everywhere recognized as the largest and best equipped school in America. Its complete organization, its imposing Conservatory building, and splendid equipment, and the new Residence building offer exceptional facilities for students. Situated in Boston, the acknowledged music centre of America, it affords pupils the environment and atmosphere so necessary to a musical education.

Every department under special masters. The student's capacity sets the only limitation to his progress. The reciprocal relations established with Harvard University affords pupils special advantages for literary study.
Owing to the practical training of students in our Normal Department, graduates are much in demand as teachers and musicians.

The privileges of lectures, concerts and recitals, the opportunities of ensemble practice and appearing before audiences, and the daily associations are invaluable advantages to the music student. A number of free violin scholarships available for 1910.

FIRST FIELD DAY

Merchants and Their Friends at Riverside

First Annual Field Day of the Merchants' Association a Brilliant Success

They were there. Their wives, children, and their friends were also there. To the number of 300 they gathered in the afternoon at the Riverside Recreation Grounds to celebrate the first annual field day of the Merchants' Association of our fair city. The poster read, 'Wow! Wow! and it was Wow Wow Wow that the executive committee is expected to do the home work and to the committee in charge of the meet is due a large measure of praise for the horse work which they did in making this first field day a success.

To begin with, owing to the fact that most of the merchants close on Thursday afternoons during the summer desultory ball games between the married and single men have been run on Cabot Park for the past two years. This started them wondering a field day. The merchants said yes. We will give the money and the clerks can give the time. But when it came to the final arrangements both the proprietors and the clerks gave both money and time to make this day the success that it was.

Promptly at 2 p. m. the game started. The 100-yard dash for married men. This was won by a rank outsider. Not an outsider in the fact that he was not a Newton merchant, but because he did not intend to run and merely came in to oblige the judges—thus again 'virtue is its own reward'—and the committee hope that Mr. Hayford's 14-pound ham will be thoroughly enjoyed by Dr. Naylor.

The running high jump brought out a number of contestants, and the 10 pounds of fireworks given by Spiegel were certainly enjoyed. We hope the young man will enjoy them. The 50-yard slow race for proprietors!!! Oh me, oh my. It was to be done in two minutes and 30 seconds, and out of the large number of entries only one man landed exactly on the spot. In this connection was a little joke. The committee had given out that it might be 50 yards in two minutes, and there were several who bit at this most alluring bait and came in nearer the two minutes than two-thirty point.

The 220-yard run for the clerks was hot. So were the clerks when they got through. Enough said.

The boys' and girls' races called for prizes of fancy crackers and olives or candy and if we should ask the 14 years old or under to work that hard for $1 a minute they would certainly refuse. The committee desires at this moment to express their sincere obligation to all those taking part in the contest as the contestants from start to finish were entirely volunteers.

THE FAT MEN'S RACE.

Well Well Well Well Well Well Well The stone crushers got in action in a way most gratifying to the committee. No man over 180 pounds wants to run in a hot sun, but quite a number volunteered and the special prize by Squire & Co. of Boston as well as the regular prize were certainly deserved.

Then the ball game. This had to be limited to seven innings on account of time. For the last two minutes the married men with great enthusiasm and much 'rooting' have put it all over the single men. Yesterday was a table set for a hot sun, but quite a number volunteered and the special prize by Squire & Co. of Boston as well as the regular prize were certainly deserved.

In the evening dancing was indulged in until 11 p. m. with about 75 couples on the floor. The prizes were: Cateup, coffee, silk necktie, tobacco jar, jack knife, printing, ash tray, maple flake, olives, shoes, cocoa, cake, tea, hair cut, shave, shampoo and massage, canteen, preserved ginger, candy, soap dish, bag of flour, corn flakes, one weeks shave, potatoes, frankforts, clams, fancy cake, tapping a pair of shoes, a dinner for two, coffee, fancy cigars, etc., to numerous to mention. Those donating prizes or money were: P. W. Sanderson, F. H. Franklin, J. G. Newcomb, E. E. Snyder, C. A. Aston, A. K. Dean, C. E. Josselyn, Rees & Bernier Co., Irving & Wheldon, Walker Shoe Co., Wilson Bros., William P. Sweeney, W. E. Mars, W. L. Sampson, C. R. Meigs, M. H. House, J. T. Ripley, Charles M. Hewitt, Joseph P. ## OLD HOME WEEK.

Gratitude to Governor Rollins of New Hampshire for instituting Old Home Week should be perennial. It is one of the grandest and most heart-appending thoughts for a holiday that has been brought forward for many a year. The idea reaches the sublime. One of the saddest things in connection with our New England people is the restless, moving, changing peculiarities existing everywhere. New Englanders who have left their birthplace and gone away are found in every state and territory from the Hudson to the Pacific and from the Great Lakes to the Gulf of Mexico.

There is a rapidly increasing desire among men whose early life was spent on the farm, who left it and went to the larger cities and have accumulated property, after they have passed middle life, to return to the old home farm or some other farm to spend at least their summers in the country. It is this class of men who are buying the old abandoned farms in New England and not only repairing the old buildings and improving and adding to them and thereby making more comfortable homes, but in addition rendering them more attractive. The outside improvements are often very attractive and artistic. Trees, plants and flowers adorn the grounds and wonderfully improves the taste of the farmers, their wives and children, bringing to them more contentment, pleasure and happiness. Beside this, the farmers and their sons and daughters are called in to aid in this work of renovation and improvement and many a dollar earned by them is spent in making their homes attractive.

The question is often asked, "Why there are so many abandoned farms or so many farms owned by strangers?" I think the reason is easy to find. The former owners of those farms determined to give their sons and daughters a better education than they had been able to obtain for themselves, and so they worked early and late, sold the best the farm produced, lived on the poorest and economized in everything to enable them to pay for their children's education.

These sons and daughters were generally sent away to the academies, scattered over New England, where many prepared themselves for school teachers and some of the boys for college. After their return to the farm the home life seemed tame and uneventful. They missed the companionship of schoolmates and others whose acquaintance they had made in the little villages. Soon the desire for a life different from that on the farm led them to wander away and the farm-home-life knew them no more.

Lonely the fathers and mothers lived on bereft of their children, whose home-coming once on twice a year was the one bright spot in their lives. Sometimes one of the boys, and generally the one least inclined to educational advantages and wanderings, remained at home, taking care of his parents as long as they lived and inheriting the farm after they died.

Very often after the parents had passed away, neither of the children cared to live on or keep the farm and it was rented or sold and passed into strangers' hands. They have sold their birthright and lose interest in it. And in later years they have no old home to return to for a visit or to spend their declining years.

Last year, when I visited my old home which had been sold nearly half a century ago, and found the changes that had taken place and been made, I wished I had purchased it a third of a century ago and kept it as it used to be, that I might now return to it and spend months of the summer time.

Of course some changes would of necessity have come to it and the many dear ones who have passed away over the River and entered into their eternal rest would not be there to welcome me, but the boyhood home would still be mine. Familiar footsteps and loving voices would not greet me, but I would be there where they used to be and I perhaps might feel their presence.

Occasionally the parents, when they grew old, would go to live with one of their children who had made a home elsewhere.

From these various causes the farms were abandoned, the buildings were not kept in repair and the farm lands slowly returned to bush and forest.

There is one other reason why so many farms have been abandoned and allowed to grow up to woodland. The old-time farmers were not scientific farmers. The virgin lands were cleared of the timber and wood needed and then were burned over and the abundant potash in the ashes fertilized the land for many years. Broad acres were cultivated because manure and other fertilizers were not needed. By the time two or three generations of farmers had lived on the farms the land became impoverished and did not produce crops as at first. And they did not understand how to fertilize thoroughly a few acres and by so doing largely increase their crops.

The Old Home Week is drawing larger numbers each year back to the Old Home or to their native towns, where they see old familiar spots and well remembered faces and the boys and girls of long ago are boys and girls again, although a little older and the snowflakes have fallen on head and face. But the heart grows young again and visions of youthful joys and pleasures loom up as of yesterday.

God bless the Old Home Week.

J. F. FRISBIE, M. D.

MRS. BUTLER HONORED SPLENDID SUGGESTION

Mrs. William Butler of Newton Centre, known and honored among Methodists throughout the world as "Mother" Butler, who has just celebrated her 90th birthday anniversary, received a cable message from Baroda, India, announcing the informal opening of a hospital for women and children erected in honor of this beloved missionary in the capital of the Gaekwar, the India prince who lately visited Boston. The building, which cost about $20,000, will be for the relief of women and children. Dr. Belle J. Allen, the physician in charge, is a Boston University graduate and prepared especially for this work by post-graduate courses in Vienna. Prominent officials of Baroda state have expressed their interest in this philanthropy. It will be recalled that Mrs. Butler was largely instrumental in sending the first woman physician to the women of India, in 1869, and has always been closely identified with the effort to afford medical aid to the secluded inmates of Oriental zenanas. In spite of her advanced age Mrs. Butler is able to travel and has given four addresses, three in Washington this summer, in behalf of India. She is deeply interested in the coming session of the general executive committee of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, which will be held in the First Church, Temple street, Boston, in October. It will be 32 years since this national meeting was held in Boston, where the society was organized by Mrs. Butler and seven other women in 1869, and which has disbursed more than ten millions of dollars since that time for foreign missionary work.

POLICE NOTES.

Charles Condos, a Greek fruit dealer, was fined $15 Monday morning for assault and battery on Charles Scipione, the official Italian interpreter of the Police Court. The trouble arose over an attachment placed on Condos' store at Nonantum by Scipione, who is a constable. He attempted to assume charge of the money in the cash register, but Condos objected strenuously and an officer was called in.

A resident of West Newton has notified the police that he is caring for a stray dog that has apparently wandered far from home. The animal's collar is inscribed "F. W. Welch, 40 James street, Englewood, N. J."

Miss Kathleen Nolan, stenographer at police headquarters, returned this morning from a vacation spent at Canterbury, N. H.

CANOE ONLY TO EXPERTS.

The number of drownings and accidents resulting from the overturning of canoes on the Charles has led to an agreement among the boathouse men in Newton and Waltham to take measures to prevent such accidents.

It is announced that hereafter, as soon as it is seen that persons hiring canoes are not familiar with the handling of them, they will be requested to return to the boathouse, and if they refuse to do so they are to be assisted by employees of the place. The new plan already has been put into operation, and during the past week several young men engaged in showing girl friends how to handle canoes have been hustled ashore.

At the last regular meeting of Charles Ward Post, G. A. R., of this city, the following preamble and resolutions, reported by a special committee, consisting of Past Senior Vice-Department Commander George M. Fiske, Past Department Commander W. A. Wetherbee and Past Post Commander Hosea Hyde, were unanimously adopted, and the adjutant instructed to have the same published in the press of Newton:

WHEREAS, a new star is about to be added to our flag, by the admission to the Union of another state, therefore

RESOLVED, that Charles Ward Post No. 62 of Newton, Department of Massachusetts, G. A. R., suggests that the new state be admitted under the name of Lincoln, in honor of Abraham Lincoln.

RESOLVED, that we suggest to the commander of the Department of Massachusetts that he take the matter up with the various posts of this department for their indorsement, and that proper steps be taken to bring it to the attention of the competent authorities at an early date, in the name of the Grand Army of the Republic.

We understand that this measure is meeting with the hearty approval of our most distinguished fellow citizens, Bishop Maillet being among the number.

IN MEMORIAM.

Mrs. Helen M. Brown, wife of Rev. Taron Brown, died on Wednesday morning, Aug. 10, of gastric cancer. She had for years been suffering more or less with malaria and complaints incident to it, and early in July an attack reinforced the old disease and in time assumed a malignant form. A fatal termination was hardly foreboded for nearly a month, when medical examination discovered the cause of her growing loss of appetite and consequent decline.

Mrs. Brown was a lovely woman, quiet and retiring in her temperament and habits, and endeared herself to a large circle of neighbors among whom she lived more than 20 years. Their affection and anxiety for her during her sickness, and their grief at her death were a spontaneous tribute to her bright and genial nature and unselfish kindness. Her husband is lonely and inconsolable for her loss, all their children and grandchildren having long since passed away.

The death of this good woman's death recalls a singularity of family sorrows, for the death day of both the son and daughter of the bereaved couple occurred also in August, the first on the 25th and the second on the 17th.

The funeral services were held at Mrs. Brown's late residence, 402 Newtonville avenue, Friday, the 12th, Rev. George Butters being the officiating minister. A friend of the deceased and knowing her well, he paid a just and tender tribute to her peaceful life and the Christian qualities that won the love of so many friends.

The burial services were solemnized on Saturday, the 13th, in the cemetery at Willington, Conn. Mr. Butters accompanying the mourners to perform the last obsequies by the grave of the wife and mother where she will sleep with her departed kindred.

OLD TREE DOWN

After having stood as a landmark for more than a century, the stately elm tree at Houghton's corner, West Newton, is being cut down, work having been started Tuesday morning. So large is the tree and its spread of branches, and so peculiar its situation it is expected that the work will take more than a week. There is some doubt as to the exact age of the tree, although a sign on its trunk bears the date 1767. By some it is said that the tree was planted by Seth Davis of West Newton, who died at the age of 101 years. It was in 1762 that the tree was recognized as one of the landmarks of the city. Several years ago there was talk of demolishing the tree, but finally dwellings and stores were built around it in such a manner that the trunk can only be seen from one position on Washington street while the top towers above the surrounding buildings. The trunk is fully six feet in diameter and there is much speculation as to the number of cords of wood contained in the ancient elm.

"PARAGON PARK" AND PALM GARDEN.

One has a very busy whirl of it around "Paragon Park" and the Palm Garden at Nantasket Beach. There is so much to see and hear, and so much to do, that the afternoon or evening—in fact, both afternoon and evening—are over before one realizes how time is flying. That is one of the secrets of "Paragon Park." Manager Dodge seems to have discovered the way of how to arrange his amusements and entertainments, his feasts for the eye and the inner man, and his feasts for the ear, in such a way that the visitor jumps from one new delight to another with the light heartedness of youth let loose from school. It is rejuvenating to visit this city of festivity by the sea where gaily, song, bands and orchestras, unique and wondrous sights, startling accomplishments in the water, in the air, and on the earth are displayed in the free open-air circus performances, where the menu and wine list in the Palm Garden are unexcelled, where novelty rides, wondrous sights, theatres of bulesque, minstrelsy, vaudeville, comic opera and moving pictures are found on every hand, in fact where one is constantly astonished and entertained and amused. There will be the usual special Sunday features, including the startling balloon ascensions and parachute drops, three of them in quick succession, by Aroza, the intrepid aeronaut, in addition to the regular features seen every day in the week. The special features of grand fireworks displays on Wednesday and Saturday nights continue to draw tremendous crowds. La Diva Venus, Demon, Speedy lose none of their immense popularity as leading features in the free open-air circus.

Maclyn Arbuckle will be starred this season by Joseph Brooks in a farce by George Hobart called "Welcome to Our City." It will have its New York hearing at the Bijou in September. Mr. Arbuckle's role is that of a Southern gentleman who comes to New York on his first visit. He is welcomed by a Broadwayite, who lands him in court, and then into a mess of trouble before he learns that a winning smile is not always a sure sign of good intentions.

WORDS OF PRAISE

The New England Magazine for August has the following appreciative article on Mayor Charles E. Hatfield, together with a good likeness:

"He made politics a diversion for a few years and, behold, he found in it a fine art. And as fine arts should be, he kept his political practice clean. He fought with the weapons of a gentleman and he attained to the habit of winning, constantly winning. So when, a year or two ago, the Republican party of Massachusetts was in need of a chairman for its state committee it turned instinctively to the smiling man from Newton who under the cordial and debonaire exterior conceals as keen a political sense as ever directed the workings of his party in this Commonwealth. That his cape of victory will be adorned with new feathers ere the snow falls may be taken for granted. But his activities are not all embraced within the great game of getting votes. He is lawyer, financier and chief executive of a wonderfully attractive city. To the fine performance of his duties in those lines he adds the voluntary work of a citizen whose public spirit tends in the direction of improvement in education and recreation. Not yet 48, Charles Edwin Hatfield has probable years of new achievement before him. He has 'arrived,' but he will not loiter about the station."

TO GLOUCESTER.

The fine, newly-equipped Boston-to-GloUCESTER steamboats have begun their daily and Sunday trips to the quaint old fishing city of Gloucester. These cooling and highly invigorating trips are delightful in the extreme. No such views of the far-famed North Shore can be had otherwise than by these splendid boats of the Gloucester line—safe, commodious, fitted with every comfort and convenience, and supplied with good music. If you want to "get next" to nature's most fascinating side, take one of these trips at 10 a. m. any weekday (10:15 Sundays), and go up the cool and enchanting North Shore.

A BEAUTIFUL SIGHT

A night blooming cereus, probably unequalled in this section of the country, blossomed this week in the private greenhouse of Mrs. Henry E. Cobb on Bellevue street, Newton. Sunday evening 27 blossoms appeared, 45 on Monday night and seven on Tuesday night, making a total of 79 blooms. Although the monster cactus plant, which almost covers one side of the greenhouse, has blossomed many years, it has never before shown such a large number of flowers or as perfect specimens as this summer.

Jacob Miller, the gardener who planted the slip a third of a century ago and has carefully cared for it ever since, exhibited the prize with considerable pride.

"Plenty of sunlight and water are about all that it has needed," said the gardener, as he arranged the spreading flowers so that they would show to best advantage. "I don't think there are many as large or as fine as this; certainly I have never seen one to equal it," said he.

Each of the buds that bloomed had a spread of 10 inches or more. Early in the evening the buds began to open, until at 9:30 practically all were fully open. They remain in bloom throughout the night, beginning to close with the approach of daylight, not to open again until another year.

Every specimen of the vanilla-scented flowers showed rich white and yellow coloring. During the time the flowers were expanded they gave out fragrance of great penetration, which was perceptible for a considerable distance.

MR. OTIS BURIED.

A large number of friends and neighbors attended the funeral services of the late Benjamin F. Otis which were held last Friday afternoon at the West Newton Unitarian Church. The city government was represented by Mayor Hatfield, ex-Mayors Fenno, Wilson and Weeks, Aldermen Burr, Moore and Williamson, and all the city officers were present. Notwithstanding the request of the family that flowers be omitted, the casket was surrounded by beautiful floral tributes. Rev. Julian C. Jaynes, the pastor of the church, came from his summer home on Prince Edward Island to officiate and departing from his usual custom spoke feelingly of the character and work of Mr. Otis. Mr. W. G. Hambleton rendered selections on the organ. There were no pall-bearers and the ushers were Acting City Auditor C. L. Hatch, City Treasurer Francis Newhall and Mr. Lewis E. Coffin, chairman of the Board of Assessors. The body was taken to Mt. Auburn Cemetery.

REV. DR. BRODIE DEAD

Rev. James Fairbairn Brodie of Auburndale, prominent for many years as a Congregational clergyman and for the past two years connected with the editorial department of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, died Tuesday, after a brief illness, at a private hospital in Jamaica Plain. He was in his 57th year.

Rev. Dr. Brodie was born in 1854 in Hammond, N. Y., was graduated from Hammond College in 1876 and from the Union Theological Seminary in 1881. In 1889 he became pastor of the South Congregational Church at Salem, Mass., occupying the pulpit for 15 years. For several years after leaving Salem he was treasurer of Fisk University at Nashville, Tenn.

While in Salem Dr. Brodie was actively identified with the best interests of the city, being president of the Congregational Club and of the Salem relief committee. His widow survives him.

The funeral was held in his home at 298 Central street, Auburndale, on Wednesday afternoon. It was attended by many clergymen and former parishioners.

Four clergymen who were his associates in the offices of the mission board conducted the services. They were Rev. J. L. Barton of Newton Centre, Rev. E. E. Strong of Auburndale, Rev. C. H. Patton of Newton and Rev. William E. Strong of Newtonville. The body was taken for burial to the boyhood home of the deceased in Gouverneur, N. Y.

CITY HALL.

City Clerk Isaac F. Kingsbury again assumed his duties Monday after a visit of two weeks to Lake George, N. Y. Miss Gertrude M. Bourne, stenographer in his office, has also returned from Buzin's Island, Me.

Mayor Hatfield is seeking a translation of a letter written in Spanish that he received several days ago from Buenos Ayres. It was addressed to "A Su Honor el Sr. Mayor de la ciudad de Newton." The epistle was signed by Dr. Pedro Diaz Colodrero and from what can be gleaned from its contents deals with municipal reports.

An Unnatural Conclusion.

Now she was enmeshed with her sweetest and most cherished girl friend in a corner of the piazza, and seated just inside the French window behind a massive rubber plant.

Rather significant vegetation under the circumstances, for, curious as to maiden confidences, candor compels me to admit I listened.

The bride in prospect cooed her bliss soulfully into her neighbor's ear, but through an opening in the leaves I could observe that the latter bit her lip now and then and did not appear enthusiastically joyous or congratulatory, as warranted by the occasion.

But the innocent cooling and amorous gurgling did not cease.

"And to think," quoth she, "that such heavenly bliss as fell to my lot might have escaped me forever! Dear Bob! Did I ever tell you he had proposed to me twice?"

Then the unsympathetic auditor assumed an air of innocence.

"Didn't you hear him the first time?" she inquired with raised eyebrows.

Silly Billy From Bolton.

In a certain town in the north of England there is a man known by the name of Silly Billy. Not feeling well one day, he sent for the doctor. After examination the doctor asked him if he would take a note to the Model lodging house and he would give him sixpence. So Billy, not liking to refuse, said he would. But on the way there he came across a street sweeper that he knew. He told the sweeper where he was going, but he said if he would take the note he would give him three pence. So off he went and gave the landlady the note, and he found the following written:

"Give this man a bath and keep him in till tomorrow morning, and I will call and see him."

So the following morning the doctor came and was shown into his room. Looking at the man, he exclaimed: "This is not the man I sent!"

"No, it's not, and I'll pound Silly Billy's head off when I see him!" the sweeper replied.—London Telegraph.

All Named Alike.

A certain Lord Westmoreland fell in love with the daughter of Child, the rich banker, who, however, would not hear of the match. The lovers in spite of this met secretly and kept their love alive, while Child complacently congratulated himself that his daughter had forgotten her wilful lover. One day, meeting Child in a club, Lord Westmoreland said, "What would you do if, like my friend, you were in love with a lady and her father refused his consent to allow them to marry?"

"Why, run away with her, of course," replied the unsuspecting Child. Lord Westmoreland promptly followed the advice of the banker, who became so irate that he refused to forgive the young couple and, dying, bequeathed all of his vast wealth to their child, Sarah. In order to secure the wealth Lord and Lady Westmoreland named all of their six children Sarah, boys included.—Cincinnati Commercial Tribune.

Physical Formation of Mexico.

Mexico possesses a curious physical formation. Rising rapidly by a succession of terraces from the low, sandy coasts on the east and west, it culminates in a central plateau running in a northwesterly and southeasterly direction and having an elevation varying from 4,000 to 8,000 feet above the sea. High above this plateau tower the snow capped crests of several volcanoes, most of which are extinct. Ten of them are over 12,000 feet in height, and three look down upon fertile valleys from altitudes of 17,782, 17,356 and 16,000 feet. These are Popocatepetl, Orizaba and Ixtaccihuatl.

They Were Attentive.

A clergyman preaching in a country church for the first time was delighted to find the congregation very attentive and told the vergers so after the service.

The vergers replied, "Lor' bless you, sir, we was all looking for you to disappear!"

"Why, what do you mean?" said the clergyman.

"Well, sir, you see, the pulpit is rotten and hasn't been preached in this ten year or more."—Pearson's Weekly.

Matrimonial Signs.

"That couple over there can't be married," said she. "They're too friendly. I've been watching them, and they've been talking all the time."

"Oh, I don't know," said he. "I know a married couple that talks all the time, and they're not very friendly."—New York Press.

A Crafty Approach.

"That fellow played a mean trick on me."

"How?"

"I came to me ostensibly for advice and wound up by striking me for $2."—New York Journal.

Same Old Story.

"How shall I break the news to my parents that I have failed in my exams?"

"Merely telegraph them: 'Examination over. Nothing new.'—Fleegende Blatter.

Roughing It.

"Does your wife enjoy roughing it?"

"Does she? Well, say, you should see her in a 'bargain rush.'—Detroit Free Press.

Nobility without virtue is a fine setting without a gem.—Porter.

Beth Expert in Logic.

"Tom," said a father to his son, whose school report showed him to have been an idle young scamp, "what have you been studying this term?"

"Logic, father," replied Tom. "I can prove you are not here now."

"Indeed! How so?"

"Well, you must be either at Rome or elsewhere."

"Certainly."

"You are not at Rome?"

"No."

"Then you must be elsewhere."

"Just so."

"And if you are elsewhere you clearly can't be here."

For answer the father took up a cane that lay near and laid it smartly across his son's back.

"Don't!" cried Tom. "You are hurting me."

"Not at all. You have just proved conclusively that I am not here, so I can't be hurting you."

Before his stern parent had quite done with him Tom felt that there must be, after all, a flaw somewhere in his logic.—London Tit-Bits.

The Creeping Kaffir.

The sun was shining brightly down on the farmyard, and under a large willow tree a number of rookbeekies—small, red beaked birds—were feeding. Suddenly a Kaffir appeared and fell on his knees about ten yards behind the birds. He crept a yard nearer, but if I had not been watching him very closely I could have sworn that he did not move. The man seemed to be all in one piece. He moved entirely, not in sections of knees and legs and arms and upper body. Then he winked at me, so certain was he of the success of his exploit. I am certain some of the birds saw this alien figure, yet so imperceptible were his motions that they did not suspect he was a human being—and a foe. Nearer and nearer he drew. Suddenly he lay still, measured the distance with his eye, and then, with a lightning motion, he stretched forward and grabbed. The birds arose, alarmed, shrieking shrilly—all but one. And that one was uttering, terrified and helpless, in the Kaffir's huge hand.—London Standard.

A Railroad Man's Dream.

Railroad men are strong on dreams. One morning an engineer came down to the train master's office and declared that he would not go out on his run that morning and asked for a layoff. His superior asked him what the trouble was, and when he said that he had had a dream in the night that troubled him he was laughed at and an effort was made to induce him to take his run out. But he refused and was urged to tell his dream.

"I dreamed last night that my brother was killed in a head-on collision near Topeka," he said, "and later I dreamed that old 608 blew up." As 608 was his engine, he resisted the laughter of his friends and would not take her out, and another man was sent for to take the job.

That afternoon the boiler of 608 exploded on the road, killing the substitute engineer and the fireman. A week later the engineer's brother was killed in a collision, as he had dreamed.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

The Skin of My Teeth.

In the book of Job appears the sentence, "I am escaped with the skin of my teeth," which is modernized "by the skin of my teeth" and gives the idea of a narrow escape, one so close as to be just by the thickness of the skin on the teeth, which is so thin that no microscopist has yet been able to find it. "To cast in the teeth" means to throw defiant reproaches or insults spitefully, as one would cast a stone at the exposed teeth of a snarling dog. "Tooth and nail" denotes the manner of an action full of frenzied fury, typified by biting and scratching, as when two belligerent cats make the fur fly.

Court Trains.

At the coronation of Queen Adelaide that lady's train tore itself away from the bodice, taking part of the latter with it. When Elizabeth of Austria entered Paris to marry Charles IX, her train was seventy feet long and greatly admired by the people. Elizabeth of Valois wore a train six yards long, which was carried after her by gentlemen as she danced. Mary, queen of Scots, is said to have worn a twelve yard train at balls, also carried by a gentleman.—Pall Mall Magazine.

A Heavyweight.

"And then," she said in telling of the romantic episode, "she sprang to his arms."

"She did?"

"Of course. Do you doubt it?"

"Oh, no," he replied, "but after seeing her I can't help thinking that it must have jarred him quite a bit."—Chicago Post.

Today.

If you made mistakes yesterday, forget them. No strength was ever built upon continued regret. Today is the result of yesterday, but it is more important to remember that tomorrow is the result of today.

Misunderstood.

Mrs. Hoyle—One of my ancestors was a signer of the Declaration of Independence. Mrs. Doyle—Whose divorce decree did he sign?—New York Press.

His Lady Nicotine.

Madge—What makes you think Charley has a tobacco heart? Marjorie—He seems to care more for his old pipe than he does for me.—Judge.

CHANGE OF DIRECTORS OF NEWTON CENTRE PLAYGROUND.

The executive committee of the Playground and Social Service League have received the resignation of Mr. William N. Howard as playground director, to take effect in September. Mr. Howard is to return to college for further preparation for this new and growing profession, and while his return to study is in accordance with plans made when he came to this position, the committee, after having worked with him and through him for 15 months, see him go with sincere regret, and the young people of the village echo this sentiment. Two summers ago the big playground was but little used and many parents discouraged their children from spending any time there fearing rough influences. Today the grounds are the scene of constant activity of the pleasantest kind and ball games, tournaments and meets are in order at frequent intervals, and parents as well as the boys and girls heartily approve the new era. Mr. Howard has been a successful agent in starting a new movement in a new field and all later developments will be much due to his good foundations. There is no parent or lover of the young people but wishes that he could have time to spend with the boys and girls in their playground hours, but this being impossible it is a fortunate community that can delegate to this work so thoroughly competent a friend as our director.

Mr. Howard's place in the work will be taken in September by Mr. Frederick Elchbauer of Brooklyn, N. Y., who comes to us from the Cleghorn Playground at Fitchburg. This selection has been made after the most thorough search and careful investigation and one who knows him well has written to congratulate the committee on securing "so competent a director, well trained, full of initiative, an all-round athlete, and a gentleman."

NORUMBEGA PARK.

Norumbega Park, with its picturesque trolley approaches, its ideal Charles River scenery almost entirely surrounding it, the restaurant with its splendid cuisine and overlooking the beautiful Charles, verandah orchestra concerts, canoeing and boating, electric launch trips on the river, well equipped zoological garden, casino, swing court, merry-go-round, the chalet of wonders, rifle range, box ball alleys, women's cottage, children's playground, and many other attractions has never been so popular as it is this summer. Most attractive of all, of course, is its new open-air theatre. The attraction there the coming week, every afternoon and evening, beginning Monday, Aug. 22, will be the "biggest vaudeville bill of the season. Among the leading features will be LaRose, Bettini and La Gusta, one of the most important European acts of its kind that has ever come over from the other side. They make a feature of acrobatic stunts on a novelty wire. Great mirth provokers will be the Otto brothers, the famous Dutch comedians who know more about murdering the English language in a polite sort of way than anyone in vaudeville. Carney and Wagner will be another headline feature. Their songs and stories with an original offering of single and double dancing numbers is one of the biggest hits in vaudeville throughout the country the past season. George S. Lauder from Australia will offer his novelty ventriloquism. There will be other acts and new moving pictures.

The Dog Question in Nazareth.

Among many incidents of his wanderings through Palestine, recounted by Harry Franck in the Century, is this:

"An American who was in Nazareth long ago," said a native, "told me a strange story. I did not believe him, for it cannot be true. He said that in America people buy dogs." And the mere suggestion of so ludicrous a transaction sent the assembled group into paroxysms of laughter.

"They do," I replied.

The pompous ex-mayor fell into such convulsions of merriment that his round face grew the color of burnished copper.

"Buy dogs?" roared his sons in a chorus of several languages. "But what for?"

Never having settled that question entirely to my own satisfaction, I parried it with another, "How do you get a dog if you want one?"

"W-w-w-why," answered the eldest son, wiping the tears from his eyes. "If any one wants a dog he tells some one else, and they give him one. But whoever wants a dog?"

The Widow Was Comforted.

"There is no accounting for the construction which some people will put upon certain passages of Scripture," remarked a clergyman. "I remember the story of one clergyman who went to call on a woman whose husband had recently died. He had expected, quite naturally, to find her heartbroken with the burden of her sorrow and was greatly surprised when she greeted him with a very happy smile and ushered him into the parlor.

"Well—or—sister," he said at length, "you have my warmest sympathy."

"Thank you, doctor," replied the widow casually. "I did feel very bad, very bad indeed. But I came across a verse of Scripture which comforted me very much indeed."

"And what was the verse, sister?" inquired the clergyman.

"I don't remember just where to find it," replied the widow, "but it was made up of only four words—four helpful words—'Why need I care?'"

Eskimo Courtship.

If European death scenes astonish, the consenting "Yes" of a bride at marriage shocks an Eskimo woman. Not only must a bride show herself uncoquettish; she must, if she respects herself and tribal traditions, scream and struggle with all her might when her wooer or his envoy enters her family residence and, laying hold upon her, drags her, usually by the topknot, to her new home. She may be presented with a new lamp and water pail by her bridegroom, and she is as a general thing mightily pleased at her change of estate. But she is far too circumspect to show her pleasure or affection and keeps up a noisy demonstration until she feels that she has done all that a well bred maiden should do. If she does not exercise proper discrimination in this matter her lord sometimes scratches the soles of her feet so that she cannot run away to her parents.—Harper's Bazar.

Turner's Little Afterthought.

An English critic's reference to Turner's fine picture "The Wreck Buoy" reminds a faithful newspaper reader of a curious anecdote in connection with it. When Turner first sent this picture to the Royal Academy it was hung among several brilliantly colored pictures. On vanishing day Turner found the effect of his dull gray rendering of a stormy sea altogether spoiled by its bright surroundings. Without a moment's hesitation he painted in the lighted buoy in the foreground, and its dab of crimson light showed so brilliantly in its gloomy setting that Turner's picture became the prominent one, and its rivals on each side were cast into the shade. It is curious, if true, that the most noticeable feature of the picture should have been an afterthought.—Boston Transcript.

The Shrewd Banker.

Thirteen years ago a banker lent a farmer $1,000 with which to buy stock. The farmer, of course, gave his note. The borrower lost on the stock deal and had hard luck generally, so he couldn't pay the note. Later he went away, and after many years he made good again and returned. The banker tried to collect his note, but it was outlawed by a lapse of thirteen years. One day the banker stopped at the man's farm and admired his fine pumpkins. The farmer made him a present of two large ones.

"I'll just credit these pumpkins on your old note," the banker said.

"All right," the farmer said.

That revived the obligation. The banker brought suit and recovered in full for the note and interest.—Kansas City Star.

Life's Limits.

All indications point to the fact that less than ten miles below our feet a red heat is maintained permanently and within twenty a white heat. Ten miles above us we have the pitiless cold, far below zero, of interplanetary space. To what a narrow zone of delicately balanced temperature is life confined?

Long Drawn Out.

Judge—What is your name? Prisoner—J. J. J. John Jones. Judge—Why do you have so many J's in your name? Prisoner—The preacher who christened me stuttered, sir.—London Answers.

The Rich.

It is a great mistake to believe that the rich are holding us down. As a matter of fact, they are pulling us up. If there were no rich people to keep our eyes glued upon the great gulf between having and not having none of us would hustle. We have to have the rich man's mansions prodding us, his power scourging us and his automobile butting us to get anywhere at all. We have to see his wife and daughters in silks and jewels and realize what our own wives and daughters without these things think of us as providers to peel our coats off and get into the game. None of us can go out driving with such as we have and suffer the rich man to whiz past us in prism glass and burnished brass, throwing dust in our eyes and gasoline in our hair, without doing better in the great area of human endeavor for the next two or three days anyway. Blessed are the rich, for they fill us with shame and new resolve and make us to wonder what in the Sam Hill we have been doing all these years.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Byron's "Bride of Abydos."

It was after Lord Byron arrived in Greece that he wrote that beautiful poem "The Bride of Abydos" and that exquisite song the "Maid of Athens," which, says a Paris contemporary, every Englishman of culture knows by heart. Documents enable us to establish the true identity of the heroine of this poem. She was one of the three daughters of Mr. Black, English vice consul at Athens, at whose house Byron for some time lived. After the departure of the poet Theresa Black married an archaeologist, M. Pittakis, whose widow she became several years later. Her beauty, her charm, her elegance, conquered every heart, including Byron's. In 1873 the heroine of the poet was an old woman of upright figure and still showing signs of her former beauty. With age had come poverty. The London Times, moved by her distress, opened at this epoch a subscription in her favor. She died in 1875.—London Globe.

The Gun Changers.

Among the more superstitiously inclined of the sporting Cingalese are gun changers, who allege that a gun may be charmed in different ways and by different methods. An essential part of the process, however, appears to be the muttering of certain formulae.

A gun, the changers say, may be charmed in any one of the following four ways: (1) So that it will wound the animal dead at, but will not kill outright; (2) so that he who carries it shall find nothing worth shooting; (3) so that it will not kill anything flying, but will kill animals that run, and (4) so that it will not kill anything that runs, but will kill anything flying.

No gun can be charmed at all if the owner takes the precaution of rubbing some pork fat on the barrel or attaches a piece of the outer skin of the rat snake to the stock in such a way that it cannot be seen.

How a Coal Fire Protects Itself.

A curious way in which a fire in the heart of a coal pile keeps itself from being put out is noted in a mining journal. Such fires often start in the interior of large piles of coal owing to heat developed by slow oxidation, which is prevented by the size of the pile from escaping into the air. Such fires are difficult to put out owing to the fact that the burning mass turns the coal around it into coke, which is nearly impervious to water. The pile may thus be thoroughly drenched without putting out the fire, which it never really reaches. The only way to deal with the situation is to drive into the pile a sharpened iron pipe, long enough to reach the burning coal, and then to couple a hose to the upper end and turn on the water.

The Cocoa Plantation.

A traveler in South America, where the cocoa tree is largely cultivated, speaks of the great care with which the young plants have to be protected from the sun, which if very strong is fatal to them. To secure this protection the planters shield them by banana trees and plaintain trees, the broad leaves of which give them the needed shade. And even when they are fully grown they need protection, which is given by trees known as "immortels," or, as the planters call them, "the mother of the cocoa." Thus the whole cocoa plantation has a sort of canopy.

A Starter.

A gentleman whose hearing is defective is the owner of a dog that is the terror of the neighborhood in which he lives.

The other day he was accosted by a friend, who said:

"Good morning, Mr. H. Your wife made a very pleasant call on us last evening."

"I'm very sorry," came the startling reply. "I'll see that it don't occur again, for I'm going to chain her up in future."—London Telegraph.

Not Comforting.

"Did the minister say anything comforting?" asked the neighbor of the widow recently bereaved.

"Indeed, he didn't!" was the quick reply. "He said my husband was better off."—London Telegraph.

The Kaffirs Thought It a Joke.

I once took some Kaffirs from their desolate homes in the more desolate gorges beyond the mountain ranges to the more civilized south. Like most savages, they looked with stupid indifference at the marvels about them, and once only were they excited by an incident which opened their eyes to what they considered a most extraordinary and unnatural state of things.

They were descending a road when one of them chanced to remark that he was hungry, and the English "sahib" bought him some food at a wayside shop. The Kaffir saw the money change hands.

"How is this?" he inquired in surprise. "Do you have to pay for food in this country?"

"Certainly."

"What a country!" cried the man in amazement. Then, after pondering awhile, he continued doubtfully: "Suppose a man had no money in this country. He might starve."

"It is quite possible."

The Kaffir shook with uncontrollable laughter. It was the best joke he had ever heard. He then explained the ridiculous system to his companions, and they roared in chorus.—"Where Three Empires Meet."

Literary Censorship in Russia.

In an article on the literary censorship in Russia a writer in the Frankfurter Zeitung says that some of the queer examples of this work on the part of the czar's government are worthy of note. In a poem the line "Under strange skies we may be happy" was canceled, with the remark that "no sky can be more conducive to happiness than that which spreads over Russia." A biography of Sumner mentions the novel "Korew" as his first "creation." The sentence was blotted out because "God alone creates. Man may write, work, compose, etc., but he does not 'create.'" When the names of the gods of Greek mythology are written capital letters must not be used "except in the case of Mars. Our gracious czar has had so many wars that he owes Mars this compliment." A poem was suppressed because it contained the line, "To solitude devoted, I despise the world." The censor said: "Despising so generally includes also the czar. Thank me, writer, for saving you from Siberia."

Ancient Table Courtesies.

In the Ambrosian library at Milan there is a thirteen century manuscript entitled "Fifty Courtesies of the Table." Its author is Fra Bonvesin di Riva, and it throws an interesting light on the table manners of those times. "Do not," writes this rigorous censor, "fill your mouth too full. The glutton who fills his mouth will not be able to reply when spoken to." The perfect diner is adjured not to soak his bread in his wine, "for," adds the writer, "if any one should dine with me and thus fish up his victuals I should not like it." But of the fifty "courtesies" mentioned by the ecclesiastic the prize most certainly must be awarded to the following: "Let the hands be clean, and, above all, do not at table scratch your head, nor, indeed, any portion of your body." After this the advice to refrain from wiping one's fingers on the tablecloth comes as an anticlimax.

Let the Lights Go Out.

It is a lonely little fishing bay in a corner of the Cornish coast, but it boasts a lighthouse on its queer old quay and also a story concerning it and its ancient keeper. The light was noted to be a little erratic, and so one day to the ancient keeper thereof came an officer of the coast guard. "What is this I hear?" he demanded. "Is it true that your light is never alight after midnight?" "That's right, sir," assented the ancient one equably. "Tis a fact and well known that all the boats be in and safe afore 12 midnight, so I be savin' the light." And he looked smiling for approbation.—St. James' Gazette.

Nature as a Healer.

A great, broad, consoling and fundamental fact remains that in a large majority of diseases which attack humanity under 90 per cent of the unfavorable influences which affect us nature will effect a cure if not too much interfered with. As the old proverb has it, "A man at forty is either a fool or a physician," and Nature is a good deal over forty and has never been accused of lacking intelligence.—Woods Hutchinson, M. D., in Delinquent.

His Qualification.

"I'd like to get a job on a newspaper."

"Had any experience as a journalist?"

"None."

"Then what could you do on a newspaper?"

"Seems to me that I could dish out excellent advice of some kind."—Louisville Courier-Journal.

Fatal Defect.

"I have a chance to marry an old man who has lots of money."

"Why don't you?"

"He hasn't any bad habits and comes of a long lived family."—Chicago Record-Herald.

A Great Error.

"My hero dies in the middle of my latest novel," said the young author.

"That's a grave mistake," replied the editor. "He should not die before the reader does."—Atlanta Constitution.

IN MEMORIAM.

Thoughts, suggested by the death of Miss Sarah A. Roberts, who passed away July 19, at the home of her sister in Radcliffe, Lancashire county, England.

In the going out of such a life as this, we feel that it deserves more than a passing notice. Though born of humble, yet good parentage, but subject to privation, it was not her privilege in early years to secure much of an education, but she was early instructed by her parents in the principles of religion, and that true wisdom which cometh from "days of pleasantness, and all her ways were peace."

Later in life she was in my own home for many years, and how often she told me of the early struggles of her youth, working when a mere child in the mills of England. What she acquired of books, or the first rudiments of learning, she gathered in the Sunday school as a scholar, afterward for many years as a devoted and valued Sunday school teacher. But she must have had a latent endowment, for as the years went on her intelligence surpassed many another of more advantages.

Her early ambition was to be a trained nurse, then a missionary. She did not aspire to greatness, but with God's help to do good in the world. She would often say, when called to perform some duty, "Not the pleasant thing would I do, but I want always to do the right thing."

She was of a gentle, patient nature, and in all the years she was in my home I can truly say, I never knew her to get impatient or angry in word or deed!

Who of us can compare with this? She was very fond of music and those more skilled in it used to say she had a good ear for it and a beautiful voice. How she did love the service of song in her church and daily in her round of work she again and again would sing those praises to God.

She commenced her Christian life in the Episcopal Church, England, but in America, in the various places in which she lived, she worked in the churches where her lot was cast. While in Newtonville she joined the Methodist Church under the pastorate of Rev. Franklin Hamilton, D. D. But she was broad in her nature and loved all Christians of whatever name.

But it was not her privilege to be an active Christian in Christ's church many years, for disease—chronic rheumatism—came upon her and for nearly a quarter of a century she suffered most intensely. But in the early stages of it she would brave the rougher elements, and with limping step, but joyous heart, wend her way to her dear church home.

While with me, though we worshipped at different altars, we were one always in spirit, and through the last 11 years we have been separated our friendship has still continued to the end, and she, dear heart, propped up in bed, and suffering terribly—nearly helpless, all gone, but the one right hand feebly guided her pen in her last message to me. It breathed the same spirit of trust, perfect faith and confidence in God that run through all her letters and characterized her daily life, "I give myself up entirely to Him." She would have preferred to be an active worker in God's vineyard, but shall we not say that her perfect trust and submission, her weary, hard, yet always sweet patient waiting and suffering, has won for her as great a crown, aye, a richer inheritance there?

Someone has wisely said that he who suffers submissively, patiently waiting, is serving God just as well, aye, more gloriously than in the thick of life's work and fight.

Faithful heart thy pain is over, Sweet thy peace forever more, Angel voices bid you greeting, Opened wide Heaven's golden door. Lo! The Master smiled upon you, "Come, dear child, with me to rest," You, who loved Him here so fondly, There, the glory, fullest, best.

Keith's Theatre—Rose Pitonof, the 15-year-old girl who by her swim to Boston Light performed a feat that baffled the strongest men swimmers for the past 25 years, has proved to be one of the greatest attractions Keith's has had in a long time, and the entire week the house has been jammed by admirers of the plucky little girl and she has received an ovation at every performance. It is doubtful whether Miss Pitonof's feat will be duplicated, as since she has tried many others have attempted to make the swim and failed. At Keith's in the handsomest stage setting that famous house has ever produced, Miss Pitonof is giving a remarkable exhibition of swimming and diving, a most interesting feature of it being the demonstration of the now famous "Pitonof Kick," which she used during her entire swim. Another feature of the bill this week will be Charles Miller, one of the most popular leading men that has ever appeared in stock companies in Boston. Mr. Miller will give a monologue that has met with great success on his recent trip through the West. Another big feature will be the first production here of Joseph Hart's new play, called "The Little Stranger," which was originally presented at a Lamb's Gambol in New York, and is said to be even better than "Dinkelspiel's Christmas." Others are Alf Grant and Ethel Hoag; Primrose Quartet; Mr. and Mrs. Esmonde in a sketch, and the Wood brothers, famous Irish athletes.

Boston Theatre—Monday evening, Aug. 29, marks the beginning of "The Girl From Rector's" limited return engagement at the Boston Theatre. So great was the success of this laughable farce when presented at this same popular playhouse last spring that its reputation as a most diverting entertainment has been fully established with the result that since seats for its return appearance in Boston were placed on sale the demand for tickets at the Boston Theatre box office has been incessant. "The Girl From Rector's" returns with a sensational record from the entire country where it carried off all honors for large audiences and phenomenal box office receipts. It has played three hundred nights in New York, one hundred nights in Chicago and one hundred nights in Philadelphia. The original cast will be seen with this famous Potter farce at the Boston, and includes such well known and capable players as Eliza Proctor Otis, Gertrude Millington, Nena Blake, Nella Webb, William Selleny, Kenneth Davenport, Charles P. Morrison, E. R. Burton and others. The plot of the piece deals with the adventures of a young woman from Battle Creek, Mich. In her home town she is the leader of the inner circle of society, but social duties pall and, inconspicuously, she flees to New York to seek an environment more in accord with her temperament. She finds it on the Great White Way of the metropolis and through her frequency at the after-theatre supper tables at Rector's earns the sobriquet of "The Girl From Rector's." Here she meets a host of jolly companions and falls in love with a member of the Night Owls Club, one Richard Van Arsdell. Upon returning to Battle Creek, some weeks later, she discovers to her dismay that Richard is about to marry her cousin, Marcia Singleton, and has come to the western town for the ceremony. The complications which ensue can better be imagined than described. The situations are so ludicrous and laughable that the audience is kept in the merriest of moods from the beginning of the first act to the hilarious final of the last. In the hands of a company composed entirely of comedians the interest is not permitted to flag for a single moment.

American Music Hall—Owing to the tremendous success enjoyed last week by Clyde Fitch's big laughing comedy "Girls" and the numerous requests which have been received from American Music Hall patrons for its repetition, Manager Morison has decided to present it at the American Music Hall next week. It is not at all unusual for a stock play to be presented

Three months ago it would have been hard to find any Republican at all conversant with the political situation who would not have admitted his fear that the re-election of Governor Draper was very much in doubt. Today the situation has greatly improved. Instead of doubt there is a feeling of certainty that the old Bay State will still continue to honor courage, ability and steadfastness in her chief executive. The Democratic party has followed its usual astute course and has again lost a great opportunity by its internal quarrels. It now appears certain that if Mr. Foss is nominated for Governor that he will be badly cut by the labor vote which constitutes such a large portion of the Democracy, and if Mr. Vahey is named, the Foss adherents will undoubtedly see that he is defeated in order that their man may be named in 1911. The party is, as usual, between the devil and the deep sea, and good Republicans can therefore rejoice.

The news items this week give considerable space to the selection of a new assistant at the Newton High School, and it is noticeable that the man's attainments as an instructor are entirely lost sight of in the prominence given his skill as an athletic coach. It is to be hoped that the educational rather than the physical side of his work will be emphasized after school opens next fall. In this connection it is interesting to note that the comment on the nomination of Mr. Charles D. Daly as fire commissioner of Boston also centres on what he did when a member of the Harvard football team. The argument that because a man can run a football team he must be qualified to administer a great city department is about as ridiculous as can be imagined. There are other things of more importance than athletics in this prosaic world.

The suggestion advanced by Charles Ward Post of this city that the name of Lincoln be given to some of the new states to be admitted to the Union is one that will meet with general approval and it is curious that the idea has not been thought of before. While the suggestion is thoroughly good, would it not be better to wait the time when the great territory of Alaska knocks for admittance to the Union. It is true that Alaska was not purchased by the United States until 1867, but that year is so near the Lincoln administration that the connection is obvious. In addition the resources of Alaska are so immense and its future so full of possibilities that it would be most fitting to couple with it the great name of the immortal Lincoln.

The resignation of Mr. William N. Howard as the director of the Newton Centre Playground is a cause of genuine regret. Mr. Howard has made many warm friends in this city during his brief stay by his admirable management of a new and difficult proposition.

REAL ESTATE MATTERS.

Broker Expresses His Opinion.

From a real estate man's point of view it is in extremely bad taste to depreciate the town or city in which one lives. A prominent agent in Boston says: "It is strange that so many people thoughtlessly—I do not think that they do so, maliciously—make a practice of decrying their places of residence, especially when conversing with strangers. I wish that the people in Massachusetts could be educated to the Western method of praising one's town. Anywhere in the West, go where one will, the citizens boast of the advantages of their cities or towns, and are inclined to look with pity upon the Easterners who cannot be induced to stay out West and grow. People in every Western city, town, village or hamlet are proud of their places of abode and speak of them as the 'best on earth'; as the only towns where property increases in value 'like wool on a sheep's back.' Here in the East it should be considered bad form to know something and to say something against one's town, or, if any praise is given, it is the kind that Shakespeare speaks of.

"It is unfortunate that this disparaging is largely against the class of property that the rich buyer is seeking. The average rich man is conservative; otherwise he would not have amassed wealth. The rich man usually makes large acquaintance, and when he starts out to look at real property, something in every way desirable, he is sure to know of one or more individuals in the town where the property is located. Naturally he makes inquiries regarding realty, and it is a fact to be deplored that nine times out of ten his questions are answered in a negative way. That makes him think that something is wrong, and he generally goes elsewhere. By this needless and foolish discrediting of any of the cities and towns, especially in eastern and southern Massachusetts, many of the more popular of the smaller places are influenced by the statements of these people, who have little or no good to speak of the place, or, in fact, of any body. In many instances the owners of large estates desirous of selling as a whole become discouraged, so that when the land developer comes along and offers to buy he sells to him, and he in turn to small purchasers from other towns and villages, who have no acquaintance in the town where the land is located, who do not appreciate their opportunities, but who build houses costing say, from $1000 to $1200, raise large families for the town to educate, and add only a fraction to the real taxable value. The land so disposed of is usually sold by the speculator for treble the price asked for the property as a whole.

"In a town not far from Boston a piece of property recently was offered for sale, an estate that had cost a large fortune to build. It had been on the market for several years, with many prospective purchasers. Finally it was sold at a great sacrifice. When agreements of sale were signed the buyer went to the town fathers in relation to adjustment of taxes and water rates. He made known the fact that he was buying the property and was told that, no matter what price he paid for it, he was paying too much, that the house was faulty in construction, the plumbing poor, it was impossible to warm the house, etc. This buyer, however, had the good sense not to listen to these people, but had his own inspectors look the estate over and was satisfied with their reports, greatly to the discomfiture of the town fathers."

MR. EDWIN M. FOWLE DEAD

FOR MANY YEARS CITY OVERSEER OF POOR

Mr. Edwin M. Fowle, for many years the overseer of the poor of this city, died suddenly this morning about 10 o'clock, at his home on Norwood avenue, Newton Centre, from heart trouble. Mr. Fowle returned last evening from a vacation at Marblehead and while he had not been feeling well his death was unexpected. Mr. Fowle was born in Jamaica Plain and was 79 years of age last Sunday. For many years he was engaged in the commission business in Boston and for a number of years was consul in Boston for San Domingo, being appointed by President Grant. In 1894 he was chosen overseer of the poor for Ward 6 and held that office until the board was abolished in 1905. In 1898 he was elected the secretary and executive officer of the board and in 1905 became the head of the charity department as overseer of the poor and had been annually reappointed to that office. He was also a past president of the Massachusetts Association of Relief Officers. From 1893 to 1898 he served as an assistant assessor from Ward 6. He was greatly interested in the Newton Cemetery, serving as a trustee since 1878 and as its clerk and auditor since 1882. He resided for many years in Newton Centre and helped to develop that section of the village adjacent to Crystal Lake. He was a trustee of the Newton Centre Methodist Church and deeply interested in its affairs.

He is survived by a widow, two sons, Mr. Albert M. Fowle of Newton Centre, Mr. Arthur E. Fowle, now in Mexico, and two daughters, Mrs. William M. Flanders and Miss Julia Fowle of Newton Centre.

EDITORIAL COMMENT.

The Republican Platform Must be Progressive.

We are passing through an era of insurgency. To a considerable degree business is unsettled. The desire of the people that it should be better regulated and controlled, due to the grasping policy of great and powerful corporations known as trusts, has had a disturbing effect in many directions, hitting the unoffending as well as the offending. Political lines are so loosely drawn that of most men it can be said they lean toward a party rather than belong to it. We have seen the tremendous Republican majority in Massachusetts, a majority ranging between 60,000 and 70,000, almost wiped out, and Republican Springfield contracting political habits that are much to the advantage of the Democratic party. In part this falling away is due to a feeling of unrest, in part to the fact that no sharply defined issues divide the two parties. Stump speakers find that advocacy of radical changes takes with the average audience, that praise for insurgents receives more applause than praise for regulars. It is men like Roosevelt, Hughes and Gaynor who are the popular idols.

Like some of the Western states, Massachusetts too has men who refuse to walk the beaten path. Guild talks like La Follette, Speaker Walker like Cummins, and the party cannot afford to drive such men out. Better it is to recognize the spirit of the times, to meet the desires of the people and to be progressive. There is yet no occasion for Massachusetts to follow Kansas and Iowa, to chastise the public men who have served so long and so honorably, but to keep a united party we must recognize that there is much of merit in what the newer men in public life advocate. Only by so doing can Republican success be assured.

The platform of the next Republican state convention must be progressive. To stand still, to stick to old methods and policies, to be unmindful of the changes that are going on about us, means Republican defeat.—Springfield Union.

There is much point in Speaker Cannon's recent demand that the proper action for many of the men who claim to be Republicans is to follow the lead of Congressman Foss and become Democrats. We could not for a moment include in this list of men, many of those who are prominent, and frequently called "insurgents." Progress never comes save by the individual effort that must be individual until followers are gained and others see the light. Progress in the Republican party has always come in this way, and there are many men who are honestly today at variance with their party on some particular issues, who are doing a public service by hammering insistently and unceasingly for those issues in which they are honestly interested. But there are also many men who are entirely out of tune with Republican principles and Republican policies, and who do not properly belong to either the progressive ranks of Republicanism or the strict organization itself, but who do belong to opposition that can only be associated with the most rank Democratic leadership.—Andover Townsman.

No school in this country can contribute so much toward a musical education as the New England Conservatory of Music. A steady growth of over fifty years has made it rich in experience, and it is everywhere recognized as the largest and best equipped school in America. Its complete organization, its imposing Conservatory building, and splendid equipment, and the new Residence building offer exceptional facilities for students. Situated in Boston, the acknowledged music centre of America, it affords pupils the environment and atmosphere so necessary to a musical education.

Every department under special masters. The student's capacity sets the only limitation to his progress. The reciprocal relations established with Harvard University affords pupils special advantages for literary study. Owing to the practical training of students in our Normal Department, graduates are much in demand as teachers and musicians.

The privileges of lectures, concerts and recitals, the opportunities of ensemble practice and appearing before audiences, and the daily associations are invaluable advantages to the music student. A number of free violin scholarships available for 1910.

Mortgagee's Sale of Real Estate

By virtue of the power of sale contained in a certain mortgage deed given by Frank J. Watts to the Newton Savings Bank dated April 22nd, 1908, and recorded with Middlesex South District Deeds, Book 3367, Page 2, for breach of the condition therein contained and for the purpose of foreclosing the same, will be sold at public auction upon the premises, on Monday, the twenty-ninth day of August, 1910, at four o'clock in the afternoon, all and singular the premises conveyed by said mortgage deed, namely:—

All that lot of land with the buildings thereon, situated in that part of Newton, in the County of Middlesex, and Commonwealth of Massachusetts, called Newton Highlands, bounded and described as follows:—Beginning at a point on the Northwesterly line of Lake Avenue by land now or formerly of Dorr, thence running Northwesterly by said land of Dorr, One hundred forty-nine and 10/100 (149.10) feet; thence continuing Northwesterly in the same line by land now or formerly of Rollins One hundred sixty-six and 14/100 (166.14) feet more or less; thence running Northwesterly by the Southeasterly line of Norman Road, by three curved lines measuring 7 feet, 119.66 feet, and 27.21 feet respectively; thence running by a curve at the junction of said Norman Road and Griffin Avenue 33.25 feet; thence running South of East by said Griffin Avenue by two lines measuring respectively 63.60 and 43.60 feet; thence running on the curve at the junction of said Griffin Avenue and Lake Avenue about Twenty-seven and 66-100 (27.66) feet; thence running Southeasterly by said Lake Avenue One hundred sixty-seven and 30-100 (167.30) feet; thence running more Southerly 25.03 feet; thence running more Southerly 24.84 feet; thence running a little West of South 24.97 feet; thence running more Westerly One hundred three and 4-100 (103.04) feet; thence running more Westerly 40.04 feet; and thence running more Westerly 41.97 feet by several curved lines by said Lake Avenue to the point of beginning. ## A NEW POINT OF VIEW

AN INTERESTING LETTER FROM THE FAR EAST

A New England man, who is now in Hong Kong and who has been away from this country for several years, writes the following:

Teddy Roosevelt interfered in the Russian-Japanese war and brought it to a close just in time to save Japan from bankruptcy. Whether he was the concealed tool of bankers, who became fearful as to the safety of their loans to Japan if she had to prolong the war indefinitely, I am only able to surmise, but Russia was not exhausted and Japan was.

The fighting and maneuvering was all on Chinese territory. The Portsmouth treaty provided for a restoration of Manchuria to China within 18 months. It is still in the hands of Japan and Russia, one-third of the area being under Japan and two-thirds under Russia.

Neither has any intention of getting out at all from a rich country larger than Germany and France combined.

It slowly dawns on even Teddy that he must make a showing, so he sends 16 battleships into the Pacific where with his coast lines, islands, etc., etc., he has as good a right as anyone.

He makes a great show, as if it was a feat to get a few ships through the Straits of Magellan, where inferior steamers are passing every day.

Finally, by aid of foreign bottoms, who came ahead and left coal at suitable ports, our fleet gets to the Orient.

Having a diplomat (?) by the name of Rockhill as a minister to China, the other foreign governments make a tool of him, and we come near seriously offending China.

Having made our splurge, what shall we do with our fleet? Keep it where it is needed to back up our policies in the far east? Not on your life; we can't, we have neither docks, coaling stations, supplies or ships to carry either.

Japan intimates we better take our fleet home where it came from, as to leave it in the Pacific can only indicate we have no faith in her own good intentions toward China and the Philippines.

Japanese are nice, sweet little people; some of their young women are graduates of Vassar and Wellesley. Then the cherry blossoms, the cute kimono and artistic lacquer boxes, and then they are so polite and bow so formally (and keep bowing) it is so sweet. Such people can do no harm, they are too unsophisticated.

And we have such wise people at home who believe by robbing themselves to contribute to missions, they will provide teachers who will (teach about 60 differing doctrines) preach peace on earth, good will to men, until the golden rule prevails.

Let us see about our innocent pilgrims. On the southern end of Formosa there are 280 miles of submarine cable stored ready to be run from that island to Lugon.

While our army officers were sitting around the Army and Navy Club, Manila, talking shop, i. e., promotions, pay, leaves of absence, retirement and social stunts, Mr. Jap quietly triangulated the shore at Merivales to see what effect selfe guns would have on our impregnable (?) fortifications on the islands of Coneydor and Caribao at the entrance of Manila Bay.

Finally it occurred to our military authorities to investigate the same points. In doing so they found themselves two years behind the Japanese.

Bagnio is (or is to be) the summer capital of the Philippines. It is 5000 feet in elevation and from its western ridge you can look directly over the China Sea and the gradual rise from the port San Fernando up the mountains to Bagnio. At Bagnio is the Constabulary School (i. e., the civil army of the Philippines), and Camp John Hay, a United States regular army post. The country is agreeable, though not thickly, pine clad, cool in summer and in winter a thin ice may infrequently form.

Now the following is from the lips of a Catholic father who has a school at Bagnio, and ten days later the same was told by a lieutenant, teacher at the Constabulary School.

A Japanese major belonging to the general staff, a man who spoke several languages fluently, came to Bagnio armed with letters from government high officials which authorized and permitted the following.

He had with him aids who made notes as he directed. He examined every detail of the school, even to every equipment, the knives, forks, linen, etc.; he ordered out, examined and diddle the constabulary. He investigated the resources of the country thereabouts that he might know how many troops could live off the country. He inquired as to live stock. He found out how many pounds a mule could pack up the mountain from the coast and the time required for the trip.

He wound up by calling, in full sight of the hotels and Constabulary School, a meeting of all Japanese in the vicinity, some 400, including women, prostitutes, etc., etc., which lasted over an hour, and at which none other than Japanese were present.

There are 300 Japanese carpenters working on government buildings and are under the sole control of one man. True or not, it is claimed they receive individually Japanese army wages and any excess is sent to the Japanese government.

A lady friend of mine and husband travelled in a first-class passenger coach for one day with Marshal Ito and suite. The seats run lengthwise. These perfect gentlemen? extended their legs and boots so the way was blocked, they smoked and they spit, they were haughty and overbearing. When this lady went to the dining car (they have them) do you suppose these high military gentlemen pulled in their legs and feet? Not a bit! She had to step over each and every one.

This is the real Japanese feeling for us, contempt. Now see the development of the situation.

The Omtung and Moukden railway was a temporary military affair, which China had agreed to allow Japan to make a commercial railway of it, is completed in two years. The time expires and Japan suddenly proposes to improve the road, but China sees the object is not commercial, but military, and objects.

This slowly dawns on the American government, as does the fact that neither Russia or Japan intend to evacuate Manchuria, unless forced to, but are daily strengthening their position. The strongholds of both are control of transportation and their military strength, their soldiery under the guise of railway guards.

Now comes our fool and belated State Department and about 10 days ago proposed financial assistance be given China and the Manchurian railways be neutralized. Both Russia and Japan turn Knox's scheme down flat. Knox then proposes the United States build a railway in Manchuria and neutralize it. Russia promptly replies by ordering its military forces into Manchuria, where neither China or the United States have or are likely to have a man to oppose it.

Japan quietly and unostentatiously builds battleships and prepares herself for eventualities, all the time assuring us to the contrary.

We cannot lift a finger without exposing every move and running the gauntlet of every narrow-minded hayseed and scheming politician in Congress or ambitious presidential candidate.

There is no move we can make Russia and Japan cannot anticipate and be in position to effectually counteract by the time we announce our purpose. The United States has had the respect of the nations involved because they recognize her great wealth and her power wealth is presumed to give. They know her wealth exceeds that of Great Britain, France and Germany combined, but it is dawning in the minds of the world that this wealth is emasculating the manhood of America, dulling its perceptions, that America lacks initiative, lacks international foresight, lacks nerve. That the fear of any disturbance of market values ties the hands of the United States and its government.

We claim we can live within ourselves. This is what China has been doing for thousands of years. Can we?

The game is a simple one. If Japan and Russia can compromise their differences and they can and are, and by concealment or diplomacy keep the United States inert, complaisant, and over-confident that ethics will prevail over force, they will become so firmly established, Japan in one-third of Manchuria, and Russia in two-thirds of Manchuria, and much of Mongolia, that they can defy any power or combination of powers to oust them.

The prize is the domination of 430,000,000 Chinese and untold natural resources.

I have come pretty near the exact analysis of the situation.

The United States, with more coast line on the Pacific than all nations north of the equator (omitting Mexico) combined, don't dare to keep a fleet on the Pacific that in any way offends that of Japan, for the little sawed-off yellow man has us bluffed to a finish, yet I can remember the first visit officially undertaken outside of Japan's, then hermit kingdom, when the embassy visited New York and the United States, and my father attended their reception and described to me a small child their manners and dress on his return to our home.

It may be I have overdrawn the picture a little, yet at times I am quite sure it is too weak.

Anyhow, to awaken a New England man out of his localism and social and material security and impregnability one has to explode a mine, and then he is liable to ask you if the bill for the powder isn't a little high.

AUTO NUMBER PLATES.

Next Year Figures to Be White on Blue Ground.

The State Highway Commission will soon award a contract for supplying the number plates for automobiles to be supplied next year. Like those of this year and former years they will be of blue and white enamel with the word "Mass." down the left side. The year 1911 will appear on the right hand side where the figures 1910 now appear. The commission will follow its usual practice of reversing the color so that officers can see at a glance that a machine bears the registered plate of the proper year. Next year the figures will be of white on blue background instead of blue on white background as now. Two new figures in number plates will be in appearance after Jan. 1. Automobiles used for business or commercial purposes will bear a number plate in which the figures will be preceded by the letter "B." Plates where two or more figure ones come in conjunction will have a space wider than usual between the figures to assist in the ready reading of the numbers. As it is now it is hard to properly read a number bearing several of these ones quickly. As was done this year, the taxi cabs will have a special number plate where the number will be preceded by the letters "T S" and the representatives of foreign governments sojourning here for the summer will as now be given a special plate where the number is prefixed by the letter "D" for diplomat. In all, some 62,240 plates will be required, although the contract will provide for the ordering of additional plates on a pro rata basis if needed. The first order will be for 27,000 pairs of the common number plates for the ordinary automobile; 600 pairs of dealers' plates where the number is preceded by the letter "O," there being five pairs for each number with a different letter at end for each pair; 1000 pairs for automobiles being used for business purposes and 20 pairs for the diplomatic service. These plates will be five and one-half inches wide and from 12 to 16 inches long, according to the number of letters and figures to be placed upon them. The contract will call for the first shipment of plates to reach the commission by Oct. 15. This shipment must include the whole order for the special plates and at least 10,000 sets of the ordinary plates. A second 5000 must be delivered by Jan. 1, and from

NEW INSTRUCTOR.

Alfred W. Dickinson of Somerville has been appointed teacher of algebra and coach of the football and baseball teams at the Newton High School, and he will start in next month. Long before school closed last June it was understood that Dickinson was being considered for the position, but nothing definite was done until a few days ago. Mr. Dickinson resigned as teacher and coach of the athletic teams at Somerville, and his friends are confident that he will be successful in the new post.

At Somerville High, where he was engaged after finishing his career as an athlete at Brown University, he made a big hit. Last fall he developed the football team that won the championship of the state, and he could have retained the position for this fall. He handled the baseball team last spring and had only two veterans back from the year before. Considering how he worked and the results shown by the nine he did finely.

Not only did he handle the football and baseball teams there, but he was the organizer of a basketball team at Somerville. Six years ago basketball was tried out at Somerville, but proved a failure. He mapped out a scheduled in 1908, and the team went through the season without losing a game. It captured the championship title of the season over Melrose, which took the title away from Winthrop.

Last winter Somerville again placed a crack basketball team out and Dickinson again coached it. Under his supervision Somerville scored victories over the strongest school quintets in the state. It defeated St. John's of Danvers and Winchester at Somerville, and lost to the same teams away from home. It had Winthrop to a very close score, the latter team just losing out a victory in the last minute.

It is supposed he will have charge of the basketball, football and baseball teams at Newton High in addition to teaching algebra.

Don't sit shivering with a thermometer at 56, bemoaning the quantity of coal consumed, but investigate the merits of a "WINCHESTER" heater and find why it saves for the owner one-half his coal bill. Results tell. Smith & Thayer Co., 236 Congress street, Boston, Mass.

PICNIC AT AUBURNDALE

Christian Endeavorers of Boston churches to the number of about 300 were the guests Saturday of Dr. Francis E. Clark, founder of the Christian Endeavor Society, at his home on Central street, Auburndale. The gathering was in the nature of a combined rally and lawn party, the handsome residence and estate of Dr. Clark and the lawn of his neighbor, Mr. Perkins, being turned over to his guests for their enjoyment.

The host has made four round-the-world tours and during these trips has gathered many Christian Endeavor curios which were exhibited to the guests. Prominent among these was a collection of 30 banners in the front porch, each bearing the word "welcome" in as many different languages.

Dr. Clark was the master of ceremonies and he was assisted by the Rev. P. R. Anderson, president of the C. E. Union and editor of the Christian Endeavor World. The spacious lawn of the Clark residence was taxed to its utmost capacity to accommodate the gathering.

The afternoon was spent in listening to addresses, strolling about the grounds, from which there is a superb view of the surrounding country, singing of hymns and prayer. A feature, too, of the afternoon was an inspection of the hundreds of wonderful curios in Dr. Clark's museum.

Among the guests who arrived early was a delegation led by W. C. Lovett, president of the Chautauque Street C. E. S. They entered the grounds singing a hymn, the Rev. Mr. Anderson of Boston leading. This was followed by a prayer by the Rev. Mr. Gilroy of Toronto, one of the trustees of the united societies in Canada.

Dr. Clark then made an address of welcome, saying that he had come from Sagamore Beach, where he had left Mrs. Clark with a household of guests, and that he had to leave on the 5 o'clock train for Gardner, where he was to preach Sunday. He said that the gathering was the idea of the Rev. Mr. Anderson and that he was much pleased to see so many present.

Of the speakers who were to address the Endeavorers he had words of praise, remarking that it had been his pleasure to make Mr. and Mrs. Karl Lehmann one. Mr. Lehmann is the interstate field secretary and a personal friend of Judge Ben Lindsey of Denver.

Dr. Clark expressed his gratification at seeing among those present the Rev. G. A. Tewksbury of Concord, the Rev. Luther Cady of Dorchester and the Rev. E. E. Strong, editorial secretary of the American Board of Foreign Missionaries.

Walter Howell, circulation manager of the Christian Endeavor World, and former field secretary of the Minnesota C. E. Union, was introduced by Dr. Clark. Mr. Howell spoke of the work of the society and upon announcing the opening of a question box was showered with interrogations which he disposed of in fine style. After lunch had been partaken of and a visit made to Dr. Clark's collection of curiosities from all over the world, Karl Lehmann, the speaker of the evening, was introduced. After prayer by Dr. Cady he began his address.

Mr. Lehmann said that when he saw a C. E. S. badge he associated the initials C. E. S. with the world's consecration, enthusiasm and service. These three things, he said, were what had made the society so great. Should one of these be lacking its power to work toward the desired goal would be weakened.

In the course of his remarks he said that Governor Hughes, Judge Lindsey and others were possessed of these essentials of greatness. It was because a great Christian Endeavorer possessed these requisites that the moving pictures of the Jeffries-Johnson fight were prevented being flaunted in the faces of the women and children of America. "The syndicate," he declared, "say that it is but a wave that is prohibiting the exhibition of the brutal encounter and that they will bide their time, to win out in the end. We will stand by William Shaw to the end."

PLEASE NOTICE.

Although all eyes are turned toward Boston for the big aviation meet, it should not be forgotten that Boston is also the hub of the musical universe, and that several other things are going to happen in September, one of which is the opening of the Faelton Pianoforte School's 14th season on the 22nd.

Important changes have been made in the curriculum, notably in the beginners' course, where an extra half-hour weekly is provided. The advanced course has also been extended one hour a week. It is expected that these additions will shorten the course and result in a still higher scholarship.

The standard of the Faelton School needs no champion. Its system is well known and its exponents everywhere are meeting with the most gratifying success. During the summer teachers from all parts of the United States and from foreign countries have been investigating the merits of the system of instruction employed, and it is estimated that several thousand new pupils will be brought under the influence of the Faelton Pianoforte School during the coming season.

BOYCOTTING THE DEAD.

Bob White of the Mexico Ledger recently refused to give space in his paper to a long obituary of a man who, in his life, had not subscribed for any local paper. The Marshall Index and Clarksville Banner have adopted the same policy, and many other newspapers of the state are endorsing it. This is, perhaps, the only case on record where a boycott was declared against the dead.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Sarah Stuart Robbins.

After three years of failing health, Mrs. Robbins died Aug. 16, at Newton Highlands, her home for the past 38 years. She had reached the advanced age of 93 years and two days.

Sarah Cook Stuart was born in Andover, Aug. 14, 1817, and was the daughter of Prof. Moses Stuart of the Theological Seminary. She married Prof. R. D. C. Robbins, late of Middlebury College, who died more than a quarter of a century ago. She was one of the oldest residents of this village, widely known and dearly beloved, not only on account of her extensive and lauded reputation as a writer of Sunday school books, but of others as well. And to her high ability as an authoress was added a most genial and sunny disposition.

Mrs. Robbins was the adviser and counselor of all who sought her, in joy or in sorrow, with always a ready word in the right place, and at the right time, a person of keen perceptions, a ready reader of human nature, a devoted Christian.

Her most recent publication, which appeared within the last two years, was "Old Andover Days," a book that has already reached its second edition.

Mrs. Robbins was younger than her sister, Elizabeth Stuart, the author of "Sunny Side" and of many other books, who married Rev. Austin Phelps, D. D., late of Andover Theological Seminary, and older than Mary Ann Stuart, second wife of Prof. Phelps, and Abby Stuart, who married Rev. George N. Athol. Like herself, these sisters were among the most eminent contributors to the Sabbath school literature of 50 years ago.

The funeral services were held at her late residence in Newton Highlands, on last Thursday. The following day she was buried in the family lot in the old chapel cemetery at Andover. Her nephew, the Rev. Lawrence Phelps, D. D., conducted the services at the home and at the cemetery. The Rev. George T. Smart, D. D., who would have officiated, was prevented by illness from being present.

Mrs. Robbins leaves an adopted daughter, who married the late Rev. E. P. Hooker, D. D., at one time president of Rollins College, Florida. She leaves also five nieces and two nephews, Mrs. Elizabeth Stuart Phelps Ward, Miss Mary Stuart Anthony, Mrs. Grace Stuart Brocklesby and the Misses Stuart of Hartford, Conn.; Dr. F. W. Anthony of Haverhill and Rev. Lawrence Phelps, D. D., of Atlanta, Ga.

As the funeral cortege neared the cemetery the tolling of the village bell announced the return home of the last member of one of New England's most distinguished families. And as the words "Dust to dust, ashes to ashes," were repeated, from the abundance of floral offerings, heaped about the open grave, each one present gathered a spray to drop upon the casket of the loved one, who had joined the friends of "Old Andover Days."

BURDETT COLLEGE

Practical Standards That Secure a Great Student Following.

Doubtless the success which Burdett College has earned is due not only to its practical standards of training, but also to the care which the school takes of its graduates through its situation department. After all is said and done, the fact remains the great majority of young men and women who attend business colleges do so with the desire of being placed in good positions after graduation, and herein lies one of the sources of strength at Burdett. The school has a close connection with the business world, so close that during the 12 months ending July 1, 1910, the number of calls for Burdett students was 2657, and, while the college did its best to keep pace with the demand from business men for its students, it was nevertheless unable to fill but 1281 of these calls and was obliged during the year to leave 1376 of them unfilled.

This is a most practical answer to the inquiry concerning this school's ability to secure situations for its students, and it is to be congratulated on the fact that for years it has spared no expense in developing a most efficient situation department.

Burdett has increased its plant greatly within the last three years in order to accommodate the many students who realize the advantage of the Burdett system of actual business training.

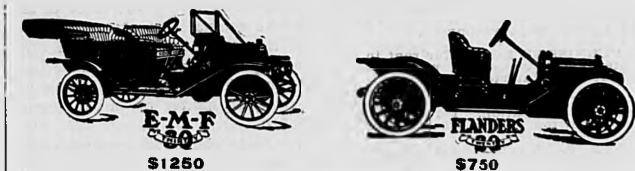

The central location of Burdett at 18 Boylston street brings it in touch with business Boston, and many young men and women come long distances in order to take advantage of the training that this school affords.

The school offices are open during August for the accommodation of callers, and just now every activity is being centered upon the enrollment of students who are to begin at Burdett when the fall session opens, Tuesday, September 6. (From Boston Herald.)

A SUGGESTION

When the city of Newton granted the electric railways a franchise it was presumed that they were not only to convey passengers, but that they were to make the service as comfortable as possible. As I make frequent use of them, both for my own and my clients' convenience, I would like to make some suggestions as to how the service can be improved. During the season when open cars are run we frequently have showers and the passengers move to the centre of the seats as far as possible, thus leaving the ends of the seats exposed and at least one sitting is generally wet. The next passengers who enter must either occupy a wet seat or dry it with a handkerchief, which puts that out of commission for the purpose for which it was intended. In my travels I have observed that on some roads the conductors dry the seats with a chamol. I would suggest that this method be adopted by our Newton roads. Another suggestion. That what is done through the courtesy of a few of the conductors be required of all. That is, that they make it a part of their duty to observe the location of vacant seats, that they may direct the passengers to them, thus relieving them of the embarrassment of looking the whole length of a car, as is frequently the case, and also save much valuable time. Newton is unquestionably Boston's finest suburb. Our schools, streets, water supply and fire department stand second to none in the country. Let's have the best street car service.

WM. H. RAND.

TO LAY CORNERSTONE

The laying of the corner-stone of the new building of the Newton Young Men's Christian Association will take place on Thursday afternoon, Sept. 1, promptly at 5:30 o'clock. (Congressman John W. Weeks and Mayor Charles E. Hatfield will be the speakers.)

In order to maintain the smooth surface of the steep graded bank that forms the rear of the new Y. M. C. A. grounds small evergreen trees will be set thickly on the slope. The work will require more than 300 trees and the stakes for their locations have been set. The artesian well has been sunk to a depth of 350 feet without finding suitable water. It is the intention of the contractors to keep on until at least 400 feet has been reached.

AN EXPLANATION.

One great trouble with the electric service in the past has been a vagueness in the popular mind as to the unit by which its commodity is measured. A writer in the New England Engineer believes the "kilowatt hour" will be best understood by telling what the amount of electricity thus defined will do. His statement is also informing as to the relative serviceability of electricity for lighting, heating and power. For example, the kilowatt hour is the amount of electricity that will pump one hundred gallons of water twenty-five feet; that will move an ordinary passenger elevator 1750 feet; that will run a sewing machine for twenty hours; or a church organ for a service, or a runabout for four and a half miles, or a three-ton truck for one mile. These are some of its uses as a power producer. In lighting a kilowatt hour is good for maintaining for an hour twenty sixteen-candlepower incandescent lamps. That quantity of electricity will heat a quart chafing dish for four hours.

NEW TAX LAWS WANTED

State Tax Commissioner Trefrey appears to be supporting Mayor John F. Fitzgerald of Boston, who in a statement issued recently, declared that the assessors of the cities and towns of the state were assessing property far below what it should be assessed for in order that the municipalities might escape the payment of a larger state tax.

Commissioner Trefrey may recommend to the General Court of 1911 the passage of legislation bearing upon the question. In his annual report Commissioner Trefrey says: "There are places where real estate is purposely assessed at less than its fair cash value in order that the portion of the state tax shall be lessened."

The matter was taken up by the tax committee of the last Legislature with Commissioner Trefrey but it was decided that it would be best to put the whole question over until the next Legislature convened. The law which the state commissioner is aiming at are the towns of the Commonwealth, although the cities are also included. Should the law be passed, some of the towns about Waltham would come under its stress.

Under present law, this year and once in every three years, the state tax commissioner must apportion the state tax. He recommends that on every thousand dollars to be raised by the Commonwealth, Boston shall pay such part and all the towns and cities big and little shall each pay so much. The division must be made so nicely that the sum total to be paid shall equal just $1000 for the 354 cities and towns in the state. That gives him the rate upon the $4,500,000 more or less to be raised by the state to fix the portion each shall pay. It is no small job to do it right and treat every municipality equitably. The rate when thus established continues for the ensuing three years till the next apportionment is made.

It has to be done early in the session and was submitted promptly this year. Then this situation presented itself as to cities and towns dodging their fair share of the state tax by law valuations; the same thing to which the Mayor of Boston alluded in a speech and this recommendation for legislation before referred to was made to the legislative committee, but had the authority been given by a new act the taxation commissioner would have had to have done the work of fixing the apportionment a second time during the same year. While it was progressing the Legislature would have to be held in session in order to ratify the new apportionment made by another special enactment to give it the force of law and the computation of county taxes and the amount each city and town would have to raise would have been held up. Therefore it was decided not to take the matter up in the session of 1910.

The next new apportionment comes in 1913 and between now and then, in 1911 probably, it is the expectation that the change desired by the tax commissioner will be made and then he will have all the authority he wants to get after the assessors of such towns and cities as are keeping down valuations to reduce their portion of the state tax and thus compelling others to pay more than their share.

Previous to 1881, as the tax commissioner states, this apportionment was made every third year by the legislative committee on taxation. Then if the committee felt that a city or town was making its assessment upon too low a valuation, it could add what it thought right to the valuation returned by the assessors of such cities and towns for the purpose of apportioning the state tax equitably. When, however, the Legislature turned this work over to the tax commissioner the act clearly provided that he should make his computation from such information as was furnished him by assessors of the cities and towns and did not give him the authority to go back of the returns. Until within a year or two there has been no difficulty under the changed law; first, because the state tax was running so low that it was not a matter of any great consequence and again because there had been made no adequate examination of the real facts in the various cities and towns. But now the state tax has mounted up to such figures as to make it worth while to look into such matters as the local valuations, and Commissioner Trefrey's four deputy supervisors are going over the Commonwealth constantly reviewing the methods and work of the local boards of assessors.

They have turned up a situation of affairs that has opened the eyes of the tax commissioner to what is going on and in consequence of what the deputies have discovered Mr. Trefrey will ask the next Legislature to give him the authority exercised by the legislative committee on taxation up to 1881.

Nothing short of a revelation from the Almighty can disclose the cause of the deficiency in the assessment of the tax upon personal property.

The inheritance tax law is of great help to the commissioner in discovering intangible property which should pay its share to the state. It has produced already a large amount in taxable securities hitherto untaxed by its operation, and in every instance the tax commissioner has notified the local board of assessors directly interested. But the Searle's case in Methuen does not stand alone in the Commonwealth. In that case Mr. Searles was taxed upon a personal valuation of $80,000 when under the inheritance tax law the commissioner found by the probate records enough taxable securities to raise his valuation to $10,000,000 but when the local board of assessors were notified they refused to raise the Searle's valuation.

It was thought that under the new law by which the tax commissioner's department was working that the assessors of Methuen could be compelled to do their duty to the town and the Commonwealth. Attorney-General Malone was in doubt about it and consequently the matter was not pushed as it otherwise would have been. When it was dropped Mr. Searles quietly gave the town $63,000 and next announced that his future legal residence would be in Salem, N. H., just across the border, to which his large estate in Methuen extended.

When the change which the commissioner is after in the state law, he can raise the valuation of a town that adopts the Methuen policy to what it should be equitably and base his apportionment of the state tax upon that, although he cannot directly fix the tax rate or prevent its citizens from moving elsewhere.

The Eyes of a Bee.

Every bee has two kinds of eyes—the two large compound ones looking like hemispheres on either side, and the three simple ones which crown the top of his head. Each compound eye is composed of 3,500 facets—that is to say, an object is reflected 3,500 times on its surface. Every one of these facets is the base of an inverted hexagonal pyramid whose apex is fitted to the head. Each pyramid may be termed an eye, for each has its own iris and optic nerve. How these insects manage this marvelous number of eyes is not yet known. They are immovable, but mobility is unnecessary because of the range of vision afforded by the position and the number of facets. They have no lids, but are protected from dust and injury by rows of hairs growing along the lines at the junctions of the facets. The simple eyes are supposed to have been given the bee to enable it to see above its head when intent upon gathering honey from the euns of flowers. Probably this may be one reason, but it is likely there are other uses for them not yet ascertained.—Pearson's Week-ly.

Beating the Postoffice.

Here is a curious process by which the French postoffice was beaten. A wealthy merchant who refused to pay an excess fee was sued by the postal authorities and lost the suit. He retaliated by building a shanty in a remote district of the Hautes-Alpes, about twenty miles from any postoffice, and installing therein a shepherd. In whose name he subscribed to the daily Petit Journal. According to the terms of the postal monopoly in France, the department is bound to provide a daily service wherever required, and it would have been necessary to engage a postman solely for the delivery of this newspaper, as no other house is to be found within a radius of about eight miles. The post-office, sooner than embark on an expenditure of about $240 a year, consented to forego the 10 centimes (2 cents) in dispute, pay the defendant's costs and compensate the shepherd for the loss of his daily paper.

Donizetti and Coffee.

Douzzetti, composer of "Lucia di Lammermoor," sought inspiration in the coffeeepot. It would be interesting to know accurately the total amount of coffee this erratic genius managed to consume during his short career. It was his habit to shut himself up in his room with writing materials and three or four coffeepots full of steaming coffee. When these were emptied he ordered in three or four more, and these disposed of in their turn, another three or four. His biographer says that the amount of coffee he drank was "fabulous," and one can well believe it. The effect on his once fine constitution was deplorable. His face shrivelled and turned yellow, his lips became black, and with the inevitable breakdown of his nervous system his genius fell rapidly into premature decay.

Routed the Enemy.

In some of the London courts there are private dining rooms reserved for the exclusive use of the legal fraternity. Into one of these rooms one day there bustled a gaunt female who on being courteously approached by a junior counsel flintly declined to leave. Thereupon an unblinking C. C. looked the lady in the face and expressed his mind. Still she did not budge. Counsel Lockwood then intervened. "I do not think there is anything unseemly in this lady's presence," quoth he. "She wears a gown and—yes, I'm pretty sure that she also wears a wig." The lady went.—London Tatler.

He Knew Them.

A minister, the father of six-year-old twin boys, was obliged to send one from the table for misbehavior. The little fellow was sitting crestfallen on a chair in an adjoining room when the maid entered. Upon spying him she said, "Oh, Billie, I'd be ashamed to be sent away from the table, as big a boy as you are too."

Billie, with flashing eyes, drew himself up, saying, "Well, you wouldn't if you'd know this family as long as I have."—Delineator.

Getting the Rings Mixed.

"One ring for bellboy, two rings for chambermaid," read a hotel guest from the printed card hanging in his room. He pressed the button, and the maid appeared.

"I don't want you," said the guest. "I rang once twice."

"Oh," replied the maid, "I thought you rang twice once."—New York American.

Marriage.

Muriel (letting him down easy)—I should advise you not to take it to heart. I might prove a most undesirable wife. Marriage is a lottery, you know. Muriel (bitterly)—It strikes me as more like a riddle. One man gets the prize and the others get the shake.—Smart Set.

His Wild Flower.

"Now, Harry," said the teacher, "can you give the name of some wild flower?"

"Well," answered Harry after a moment's thought, "Indian meal is the wildest flour I can think of."—Exchange.

Partial.

"Will your son take a full college course?" "No, not quite. He will have baseball, football and track athletics, but he fears there won't be time for basketball."—Cleveland Leader.

Subtlety may deceive you; integrity never will.—Cromwell.

PLAYGROUND NOTES.

Monday afternoon the Newton Centre team will play the West Newton team at the West Newton Playground. On Wednesday afternoon the West Newton team will play a return game on the Newton Centre Playground. Labor Day afternoon the two teams will play the third game at Newton Centre. This series of games will decide the championship of the All-Newton Baseball League. Last year Newton Centre won the championship.

Saturday afternoon there will be a game between Newton Centre and a picked team at the Playground.

The Labor Day meet at the Newton Centre Playground will be an all-round test. The first four races in each event will score points 5, 4, 3, 2, respectively. To the three men having the highest total points cups will be awarded. Ribbons will be given for first, second and third in each event. The events will be 100 yards dash, 880 yards run, high jump, broad jump, and 12-pound shotput. This competition is open to any resident of Newton who is interested in the success of our Playground and who desires to make this an attractive annual event. Entries can be received from amateurs only. Junior events open to any Newton boy under 14 years of age or 14 years old and weighing less than 90 pounds will be held. Ribbons will be awarded for first, second and third places. The events will be 50 yards dash, 440 yards run, sack race and obstacle race. Entries should be sent to William Howard, playground director, Newton Centre.

TWELFTH PLACE.

The Newton veteran firemen attended the 20th annual muster of the New England States Veteran Firemen's League, held at Fall River on Wednesday. The local tub was twelfth in the playout with a stream of 170 feet 4 3/4 inches, which was 55 inches behind first place.

MR. FOWLE BURIED.

The funeral services for the late Edwin M. Fowle took place Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock at his late residence, Norwood avenue, Newton Centre. There was a large attendance of neighbors and friends. Rev. William E. Huntington, D. D., president of Boston University, officiated, assisted by Rev. Charles A. Melden, pastor of the Newton Centre Methodist Church. The pall bearers were Messrs. Albert M. Fowle and William M. Flanders of Newton Centre, Henry Miller of Dorchester and William E. Walbridge of Toledo, O. The interment was at Newton Cemetery.

AMINA

"Amina" suggests something sweet, alluring and oriental, but it would be difficult to guess precisely to what the name applies. A prize was recently offered to the one who could solve the problem, but although several thousand answers were submitted not one was correct. Some thought it referred to an Egyptian Queen from one of the old Dynasties; others that it was the title of a new work of fiction, etc., etc.

The truth is that "Amina" is the name of a recent musical composition (an Oriental Intermezzo) by the famous Berlin composer, Paul Lincke, the writer of the world-renowned "Glow-worm," "Castles in the Air," "Spring, Beautiful Spring," waltzes and numerous other works, well known in every country of both hemispheres.

The extract given below will serve to recall this composition, which has been a standing favorite on musical programs since its publication.

A vocalized edition of "Amina," which, by the way, is one of the attractive features of "The Midnight Song," a successful Broadway musical production, has also been issued, containing a lyrical setting in perfect accord with the music.

BENNETT—WILLIAMS.

A pretty home wedding took place in this city Saturday night, when Miss Lois E. Williams, for three years teacher of swimming and basketball at Lasell Seminary, became the bride of Wallace C. Bennett of Wollaston, Harvard '08, and prominent as an athlete while in college.

In the presence of many guests the ceremony was performed by Rev. R. Perry Burke, pastor of the Chelsea Universalist Church. The maid of honor was Miss Lucy Atwood of Bridgewater, while the best man was Edward G. Curtis of Machias, Me. The bride's costume was of white satin with pearl trimmings. A reception followed the ceremony, which was performed in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Frederick E. Williams, at 14 St. James street.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

The engagement of Miss Alma B. Thompson of Rockland, Mass., to Lester A. Hall of West Newton was announced at a reception given by Mrs. J. Ferd Thompson at her summer home, "Rose Cliff," North Weymouth, Aug. 17. Luncheon was served in the afternoon by Misses Sadie Mulready of Rockland, Lillian Eldredge of Waltham, Bertha Benson of Middleboro. A reception followed during which the guests were entertained with piano selections by Miss Mulready, Miss Benson and Miss Thompson and vocal solos by Miss Thompson.

Mr. Hall is a son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Hall of West Newton and is connected with the J. F. Thompson Company of Rockland.

Miss Thompson is a graduate of the Rockland High School and is well known in social and musical circles in Rockland.

Beetles.

"Amazing things, beetles," the naturalist said. "There's a bombardier beetle, you know, that carries a gun of eighteen charges. Eighteen times, if pursued, this beetle can shoot. Under cover of the noise and smoke he escapes."

"There's a diving beetle that catches fish. He has a natural diving suit that enables him to breathe under water. He will plunge down fifteen or twenty feet after a minnow or young shad."

"The sexton beetle spends its life burying dead animals. It lays twenty eggs in each carcass, and thus the young on hatching have an abundance of juicy and high meat to feed on. Sexton beetles, working together, have been known to bury a rabbit."

"The skunk beetle is so called not without reason. Dare to come too near him in a garden and he will wave his antennae furiously and discharge the vilest odor at you. The common kitchen roach has this skunklike gift also; hence I don't advise you to make a pet of him."—Los Angeles Times.

Owls' Houses.

Owls' houses are for the most part quite without lining. Whether from design or pure laziness the bones and skulls of small animals which they have killed are left scattered about the floor. Growsome playthings for the owl children! But one can scarcely imagine even a baby owl being anything but wise and dignified. It is easiest to picture them apparently gravely musing on these skulls like monks in their dark cells.

Since so many of the owls have their homes in hollow trees, we might expect some of their near relatives, the hawks, to be inclined to live in the same way. One of them, the little sparrow hawk, does nest in the flicker's abandoned home and in comfortable knotholes. This bird, too, is satisfied with perfectly bare walls and floor, though the floor consist of small chips left by the decaying wood or by some woodpecker.—St. Nicholas.

Pasteur's Tribute to Lister.

Of all the tributes to the genius of Lord Lister, the discoverer of antiseptic surgery, probably the most touching was that paid to him by Pasteur, the famous French scientist. At a meeting of savants in Paris many years ago Lord Lister was present, and his brilliant achievements were explained to the audience by Pasteur. As he progressed in his speech he became more and more emotional, and at last he was so carried away by his own eloquence that the tears stood in his eyes. Finally he stepped down from the platform, took Lord Lister, who was in the front row of the audience, by both hands, led him back on to the platform and kissed him on both cheeks, after the manner of the French, in full view of the assembly. Few could have looked on unmoved at the great Frenchman's act of homage to the distinguished English surgeon.

Baths in Finland.

One of the greatest trials a visitor in Finland has to endure is a Finnish bath. The method of procedure is unique. Divested of outer clothing and attired in a light and airy cotton garment, you are slung in a sort of hammock composed of cord above a large receptacle like the boilers in public laundries. This is almost filled with cold water, into which at the right moment is flung a large red-hot brick or piece of iron, which of course causes an overwhelming rush of steam to ascend and almost choke you. Then when that process has gone on sufficiently long you are shaken out of your hammock, immersed in cold water, and after very drastic treatment you resume your garment, sadder and wiser than before your novel experience.

Effect of the Sun on Monuments.

The perpendicularity of a monument is visibly affected by the rays of the sun. On every sunny day a tall monument has a regular swing leading away from the sun. This phenomenon is due to the greater expansion of the side on which the rays of the sun fall. A pendulum placed inside, say, Nelson's column, in Trafalgar square, would be found to describe on every clear day an ellipse of nearly half an inch in diameter.—English Mechanic.

Their Ideals.

"Why did you never marry, Tom?" Inquired the young benefactor of the old bachelor.

"Well, you see," replied the single one, "when I was quite young I resolved that I wouldn't marry until I found an ideal woman. I was difficult to please, but after many years I found her."

"Lucky beggar! And then?"

"She was looking for an ideal man," replied the bachelor sadly.

Good Enough For Him.

Ascum—I see there's some talk upon the question of abolishing capital punishment. Would you vote to abolish it? Logie—No, sir; capital punishment was good enough for my ancestors, and it's good enough for me.—Presbyterian Standard.

Envy.

"Don't you think envy is a terrible thing?" said the earnest girl.

"No," answered Miss Cayenne; "not if it's the envy of some one else for something you possess."—Washington Star.

A Startling Comparison.

In silent absorption they consumed delicious cherry pie.

"James," said the hostess to the butler, "save all the cherry stones, please. Wash and dry them and put them on a shelf in the attic."

"Why," a guest inquired, "do you save cherry stones?"

"You never saw them burn," said the hostess, "or you wouldn't ask that question. All winter long I keep a copper jar of them on the drawing room hearth. As the fire burns up I stow and throw a handful of the cherry stones in the blaze. The effect is wonderful. The stones crackle and send forth delicate green flames, and puff of exquisite odor, an odor as sweet as cherry blossoms, float through the room."

"There's sandalwood," began another guest.

"Oh," said the hostess, "I use sandalwood, too, but it compares to cherry stones in fragrance as hamburger cheese compares to bellotrope."—Minneapolis Journal.

An Embarrassing Question.

Mrs. Monroe was carefully explaining to her small daughter Margaret what she must do that evening. Company would be there for dinner, and Margaret was going to be allowed the privilege of sitting at the table. She listened very attentively and faithfully promised to obey. During the first part of the meal she never spoke, but remained quiet and thoughtful, but it seemed a long time to her before the dessert came. Finally a large dish was placed near her of which the contents looked most appetizing. For some time she gazed at it, and when no longer able to resist the temptation she reached over and put her dainty finger deep into the jelly and cream, then licked her finger and continued to smack her lips with great satisfaction. Before the horrified mother could say anything Margaret remarked:

"Say, mamma, is this the jelly which the cat licked the cream off of and you said it didn't matter, there was more cream?"—Los Angeles Times.

Origin of Heraldry.

According to the highest authorities, heraldry finds its starting point in the terrorism of prehistoric man. In the barbaric custom of painting or carving the totem on oars, the bows and sides of canoes, weapons, pillars in front of houses, etc., and in tattooing it on the various parts of the body, we have the real origin of the insignia that are so precious to the upper tenor of today. It was in the ignorant superstition of the savages that he sprang from a crane or a bear or some other animal that the various "coats of arms" of the "big families" of the present time found their inception.—New York American.

Asking a Favor.

Lizzie Ann was a servant girl. She said bitterly to her mistress one morning:

"Here's another letter, ma'am, I've got from Mrs. Jones' cook, Marie. Marie says they've given her a conservatory now. It fairly makes one sick. Fibber!"

Lizzie Ann hesitated, then said diffidently:

"I bin thinkin', if I hired an auto and a photographer, would ye mind, ma'am, if me and the master was took on the front seat together? It would settle that Marie when I sent her the picture."—Spokane Spokesman-Review.

Where They Ought to Be.

"I wonder," said the wild looking man, with the multiplied whiskers.

"You wonder what?" asked the meek looking boob with the concentrated eyebrows.

"If the man who figured out the length of a week was referred to as a weekling."

"Sure," said the boob. "They also called the man who discovered ink an inkling."

Whereupon the driver from the asylum backed his wagon up and the pair were dumped in.—St. Louis Star.

A Victim of Draconian Law.

Father (who has caught Patrick stealing)—I thought you knew better than to commit a theft. You know how the law punishes people for small offenses. Patrick—How about you, father, when you stole mother's heart? You never got punished for that. Father—I got a very severe punishment, my son. I got penal servitude for life, and I am doing it now.—London Tit-Bits.

Just Like a Man.

Mr. Kradley—How mannish she is! Miss Bright—Isn't she, though? Mr. Kradley—Yes, and the funny part of it is she thinks people admire her for being so. She doesn't seem to see that people are merely laughing at her. Miss Bright—Yes, she's mannish even to that extent.—Catholic Standard and Times.

The Thing That Puzzled the Patient.

"You may be thankful for your excellent constitution. It has pulled you through many a spell of sickness."

"But, doctor, if I have such a blessed strong constitution why am I always getting sick?"—Chicago Tribune.

Ethyl's Complaint.

Claire—Ethyl is awfully angry with Jack. He threw a kiss at her. Lotta—Why did that make her angry? Claire—Oh, she says there are some things that ought to be delivered in person.—Lippincott's.

Funny to Her.

"He really is a humorist?"

"He certainly is," replied the sweet young thing. "He actually asked me to marry him."

Sea Rules of the Road.

On the sea it is even more important than on land that there should be well defined rules of the road. While there are "ocean lanes," vessels do not move along well marked lines, like railway trains. They cross and recross each other's tracks. Moreover, there is no air brake which can halt an ocean steamer within a few yards. Rules of the road at sea are based upon common sense and experience. In general, when two vessels under steam are meeting each other end on they follow the same rules as with us with vehicles—that is, each steers to the starboard or right. One short blast from the ship's whistle means that she is taking the starboard course, two blasts mean that she is taking her course to port, three that she is going full speed astern. Should there be risk of collision between a steam vessel and a sailing vessel it is the duty of the steam vessel as the more manageable to keep out of the way of the other. For the same reason a sailing ship which is running free is required to keep out of the way of one which is running close hauled.—Travel.

Testing an Explosive.

One of the most dangerous of explosives is lode of nitrogen, a black powder which the slightest touch will often cause to explode when dry with great violence. In experiments to determine the cause of its extreme explosiveness some damp lode of nitrogen was rubbed on the strings of a bass viol. It is known that the strings of such an instrument will vibrate when those of a similar instrument having an equal tension are played upon. In this case, after the explosive had become thoroughly dry upon the strings, another bass viol was brought near and the strings sounded. At a certain note the lode of nitrogen on the prepared instrument exploded. It was found that the explosion occurred only when a rate of vibration of sixty a second was communicated to the prepared strings. Vibration of the G string caused an explosion, while that of the E string had no effect.

Heredity.

Tommy was a fairly good pupil except in arithmetic. The teacher noticed with his home studies that when sums were set he always brought in answers much in excess of the correct amount. As this was unfailing he culled the boy to him and said:

"Tommy, how is it that your sums are always wrong and the totals always too large?"

"Dunno, teacher."

"Does any one assist you with your arithmetic at home? Now, be truthful!"

"Yes, sir, father."

"What does your father do for a living?"

"He's a waiter, sir."

"Ah," said the teacher, "that accounts for it. Go back and sit down."

Finnish Respect for the Law.

In Finland there is a deep and prevailing respect for law.

"Can I have a shot at an elk?" asked a stranger of a peasant who lived on the fringe of a forest well stocked with this noble game.

"No, sir. It's against the law."

"What is the penalty?"

"Two hundred Finnish marks."

"All right. Will you come along with me if I agree to pay the fine?"

"No, I won't. It's against the law, and I'm not going to break it!"—Russian Characteristics.

Distant Neptune.

The period of man's whole history is not sufficient for an express train to traverse half the distance to Neptune from the earth. Thought wearies and falls in seeking to grasp such distances. It can scarcely comprehend 1,000,000 miles, and here are thousands of them. When we stand on that the outermost of the planets, the very last sentinel of the outposts of the King, the very sun grows dim and small in the distance.

What He Had Done.

"I'd be ashamed to beg if I was a big, healthy looking man like you," said the sarcastic woman. "You ought to look for a job of some kind. Have you done anything at all during the past year?"

"Yes, ma'am, I hev," answered the husky hobo meekly. "I jist finished doin' thirty days, ma'am."—Chicago News.

Character Sketch.

"You say he served four years in a reformatory institution?"

"Yes, and it made a man of him."

"I don't notice any evidence of it."

"It did, just the same. He was seventeen when he went in and twenty-one when he came out."—Chicago Tribune.

Studies in Still Life.

"I want a few colored illustrations of beets and tomatoes."

"Life size?" inquired the artist.

"Catalogue size," replied the seedsmen, with a significant smile.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

The One Time.

"You women would rather talk than listen."

"Not always."

"When, for example?"

"When a man is about to propose."—Judge.

When a Man's Fifty.

After a man reaches fifty "all going out and nothing coming in" describes the condition of his teeth, his affections and his hair.—Atchison Globe.

THEATRES

Keith's Theatre—Special arrangements have been made for the appearance at Keith's next week of Miss Eleanor Gordon and Theodore Friebe and this will unquestionably prove the strongest combination of local favorites that vaudeville has had in a long time. Both appeared at Keith's last season and each scored a tremendous success, and in securing two of them in a comedy written by Frank Ferguson, another triumph has been scored for vaudeville. In fact, in a twenty-minute sketch Mr. Keith will have two stars who have been the leading attraction in three-hour performances for years in stock companies here. They will be features of one of the strongest bills of the season, one that will include Joseph Hart's big company of "Bathing Girls" in one of the most novel musical and singing productions seen on the stage in a long time. A feature of it will be a large party of girls diving and swimming in the surf at the seashore. Another feature will be the "Four Readings, in their wonderful acrobatic exhibition; Charles Semon, the "narrow feller," who has always been a favorite in Boston; Richards and Montrose in their singing and dancing sketch; Al Haynes and Julia Redmond in a new comedy sketch called "The Cuckoo and the Girls," and Frank Wilson, one of the greatest cyclists that has ever been on the stage.

Castle Square Theatre—The third consecutive year of the John Craig Stock Company begins at the Castle Square Theatre on Monday afternoon and evening. As heretofore, two performances a day will be given, and the prices will range from 15 to 75 cents. A change of bill will be made weekly, and the repertoire will include all the latest successes in drama, comedy, classic drama, farce and musical comedy. No pains will be spared to have the coming season rival in its success the two previous seasons at the Castle Square under Mr. Craig's management. The box office is open daily from 8 o'clock till the close of the evening performances in charge of George E. Clarke. The play selected by Mr. Craig for his opening attraction is "The Squaw Man," one of the great successes of recent seasons. It was started in by William Faversham and its popularity in London has been as remarkable as in this country. The scenes are laid mainly in the Far West, and the plot ranges from strong emotion to lively comedy, the hero being a young Englishman who comes to this country and here meets with strange adventures that have the greatest influence over his character and fortunes. The cast of "The Squaw Man" will be headed by Mr. Craig and Mary Young, both of whom will be seen to the best advantage, and the leading roles in the long cast will be played by Donald Meek, George Hassell, Walter Walker, Ben Young, Wilfred Young, Al Roberts, Mabel Colcord and other principal actors of the John Craig Stock Company. There will be a picturesque series of stage settings and the production will be under the stage direction of William Parke. The run of "The Squaw Man" will be for one week only, and it will be followed on Labor Day by a revival of "The Circus Girl."

"Brewster's Millions." Frederic Thompson's spectacular production of George Barr McCutcheon's well-known story of the same name, will be the attraction at the Boston Grand Opera House next week. The story is odd and unique and delightfully blended with romance. It tells of the efforts of a young man who must spend one million dollars in a year, and keep

The action of the Highway Commission in practically approving the Jackson report on the proposed change in telephone service and rates will undoubtedly meet with prompt acceptance by the Telephone Company. While some of the recommendations are considered radical, the establishment of the zone system on the one hand and the improvement of the service on the other ought to effect a satisfactory compromise for both the company and the public. I have favorably commented before on the proposed change and firmly believe that it will be a wise move for all concerned. In this connection it should be borne in mind that the Telephone Company has maintained a highly commendable attitude thruout the entire affair. It has met the investigators willingly, given them all the assistance in its power and has paid the entire expense of the work.

THURSDAY'S BALL GAME.

It was almost the last game of the season. In fact the married men had to get a few single ones to help fill out the game. In spite of this it was voted almost unanimously that as far as fun went it was one of the best games of the season. The score was 12 to 8, but outside of "Charlie" nobody cared how the score was. They were there for a good time and they had it. The umpiring was positively and absolutely the worst that has ever been seen on Cabot Park, but as the decisions were as bad on one side as they were on the other nobody kicked and everything went smoothly. Speaking of the game, the business men would like to see Meigs and Bascom fight it out for the whole nine innings. George certainly has one of the finest "high balls" that has been seen in the market for quite a while, and the way he fooled the heavy hitters was a sight to behold.
Newcomb did well as a pitcher, but did not like to stay in the box on account of the holes in it which were disconcerting to say the least. There were SOME wild throws, a five-foot first baseman cannot really be expected to stop a ball at least ten feet over his head without a net, and as owing to an oversight on the part of the promoters no nets were made out the slightest raps. It is hoped on Labor Day that the two teams will get together for the last time this season and end what has been a really pleasant series of games.

HOW TO DO UP YOUR TOWN.

The following clipped from an exchange is worth reading and serious consideration:

Oppose improvements.
Mistrust the public men.
Run the town down to strangers.
Refuse to advertise in your local papers.

Do not invest a cent. Lay out your money somewhere else.

Be particular to discredit the motives of public-spirited men.

If a man wants to buy your property ask him two prices for it.

If he asks to buy anybody else's, interfere and discourage him.

If he is a newcomer and pays cash for his goods charge him 10 to 25 per cent extra.

He won't tumble to your game but he may leave town suddenly and settle in some nearby place where one man's money buys the same amount of goods his neighbor's does.

Refuse to see the merit in any scheme that does not exactly benefit you. Such a course will win you the reputation of possessing extraordinary wisdom.

Don't take your local paper but run it down, and run down your officers.

A POINTED ANSWER.

Blower—In the present crisis, let me tell you, it is a case of "measures, not men."

Knower—Indeed! But has it ever occurred to you to think that it takes good men to make good measures effective?

GEOLOGY OF NEWTON

The geology lesson at Newton included the study of a somewhat greater variety of phenomena than usual, but it covered no greater period of time than that between the age of the coal formations and the present day.

Leaving the cars at Elliot, the route lay westward along the railroad, past the Sudbury aqueduct and into the oaklands beyond.

Here is a large outcrop of conglom-erate of the same series as that of Roxbury and Dorchester, and hence formed by the consolidation of carboniferous gravel beds. The pebbles in this conglomerate are the water-worn fragments of the harder rocks that made up the old Massachusetts complex, granite, felsite and quartzzite. Slates and limestones appear, but rarely since these are rocks so easily broken up by wave action that they are never found in any abundance among the pebbles of a stony beach. The matrix which holds these pebbles is a very much softer rock than that of the pebbles themselves.
Hence the exposed surfaces of the conglomerate illustrate very well differential erosion to which is due many of the earth's most interesting topographical features.

The gentle northern slopes of the rock outcropping here and its abrupt southern escarpments made even more abrupt by the fact that the rock is much jointed and erosion acts along the planes of these joints, present distinct evidence of glacial erosion. Weathering also has not removed from some of the largest and hardest of the pebbles the planings of the ice. From the general surface of the conglomerate, however, all striations and smoothing has disappeared, and the roughest of all rough surfaces, that of protruding hard pebbles, appears everywhere.

Interbedded with the conglomerate at Newton lie flows of old lava, or Melaphyr, alternating with consolidated beds of their own debris, for Newton is distinctly mapped as a volcanic region during the carboniferous age.

These lava flows occurred during the formation of the conglomerate, and constitute therefore with its beds of contemporaneous rock. The contact line between the lava and the conglomerate is that of a volcanic outflow, and not that of an intrusive bed such as appears at Newton Centre. In the one case the rock cooled without pressure, and with one side only in contact with other rock. Thus while the conglomerate below the lava presents igneous contact phenomena, that above which was not laid until after the lava cooled presents a sedimentary contact. In the case of the intrusive bed the eruptive rock cooled under hydrostatic pressure, and the enclosing rock walls on either side present the igneous contact.

At Newton Upper Falls also there was motion between the beds after consolidation, so that the contact line marks as well a fault-plane, the conglomerate having been shoved over the surface of the Melaphyr. Proceeding in a southerly direction over the oak-wooded country so slightly covered with soil that the rock seemed to protrude easily anywhere, the class passed two abrupt escarpments of conglomerate beneath which lay broad lowlands deeply covered with soil.
Workmen digging a trench at the foot of one of the precipitous ledges, said that at a depth of ten feet they still found soil. Whether this soil is a deposit of glacial debris or the result of the disintegration of blocks of conglomerate that may have broken off from the ledge north of it is a question undecided. The conglomerate being distinctly jointed, might, under the action of frost and weather readily break up block by block along the joint cracks.

On the surface of the more southerly escarpment appear some interesting features. About half-way down the ledge one can trace the course of the stream of water which flowed into a pothole five or six feet deep and two or more in diameter, and then continued on toward the east down the side of the rock. Only half of the pothole, however, appears. Hence results some interesting speculations.
The stream drew its supply of water undoubtedly from the melting ice, but whether in one of the crevasses of the glacier a so-called glacial mill was formed, and the other half of the pothole was made in the wall of ice that has since melted away or whether it was formed in a block of conglom-erate that has since been removed by erosion is the question to be answered by the student. Professor Barton favors the latter view, since he thinks the resistance of ice and rock to water action would not have been so far equal as to have allowed the wearing away of the rock in such a form to such a depth.

Crossing the bridge from Newton Upper Falls into Needham the class proceeded along the aqueduct as far as rocky lands bordered it. Then looking toward the southward a broad channel-like valley lay before them on either side of which rocky banks could be discovered. Northward also for some distance, though not with the same distinctness the channel could be traced. This channel marks the preglacial course of the Charles River, the course in which it flowed during the consolidation of the conglomerates and lavas.

For much of its way the river still flows along its old bed, but here as the ice melted a dam lay athwart the stream and deflected its waters into a new channel. In general whenever a river is found cutting its way back through the country rock and forming cascades and rapids, its channel is comparatively a new one. The Charles at Newton Upper Falls has cut its way back for a long distance since it first took this new channel, as the Niagara River is doing also on a grander scale, leaving canyon-like walls on either bank that add much to the picturesqueness of the landscape.

Returning along the aqueduct, the way led to Echo Bridge and across it, then down the rocky banks of the river until that wonderfully beautiful picture framed by the largest span of the bridge burst upon their view.

It is so rarely that one finds a sufficiently small portion of the landscape so far severed from the rest as to present all the details of its beauty at once to the eye that he is quite willing that the artist should make the selection, circumscribe the picture, and even reproduce it for him before he can enjoy it. At Echo Bridge, however, the builder of the bridge has framed in a bit of natural scenery, and as one gazes at it beyond the arch and the strikingly effective setting of the river banks, the puny imitation and dead flatness of the best painted picture becomes sadly apparent before the fullness of life and vigor in nature.

A short walk along the hemlock-shaded gorge brings one to a cave in the rugged conglomerate which doubtless served the Indians for a retreat and which their fires very much assisted the weather in enlarging.

NEW ARGUMENT.

Advertising Informs Customers and Saves the Time of Clerks.

A new argument in favor of newspaper advertising comes from Des Moines by way of Waverly, Ia. The editor of the Waverly Democrat, a weekly paper with no special interest in the fortunes of its daily neighbors, reports an illuminating conversation with a successful Des Moines merchant, who said, speaking of his advertisements:

"They pay in two ways. They bring customers to our store, and they keep down our expense for clerk hire fully one-half, for the ads make it possible for one clerk to do the work of two.
They prime the customers with the information that they would otherwise have to get from the clerk at the expense of his time.

"Having read our announcements,
in four cases out of five a customer comes into our store knowing just what he wants and just what he will have to pay, and all the clerk has to do is to produce the goods and get the money for them. In a store that advertises properly there are very few people who come in 'just to look around,' and as a consequence business moves easily and briskly."

The merchant went on to say that several years ago, when one of his partners thought that the advertising bills were too high, the firm dropped its Saturday ads. Just to see what would happen.

There was the usual rush Monday,
and the partner who wanted to cut down the advertising smiled triumphantly. But he laughs best who laughs last. The man who tells the story says that when night came everybody in the shop was worn out.
Heads of departments said they must have more help.

Yet the sales were the lightest of any Monday for a year. An unusual number of the buyers did not know exactly what they wanted, and the clerk's time had been consumed in helping them make their conclusions.
On other Mondays their conclusions had been made in advance by reading the ads.

No doubt merchants in other towns could give similar testimony. A force in business that at once increases sales and keeps expenses down is too important to be ignored.

SAGE UNCLE JOSH.

Freddy—Ma, whenever pa meets Dr. Vandal he all says to him, "How are you, old boss?" What does he mean by that?

Ma—Oh, I guess it's nothing more than a term in common use to express familiarity.

Uncle Josh—Maybe, but all the same I rather think he calls the doctor "old boss" because he's such a famous charger.

MRS. BAIL DEAD.

Mrs. Elizabeth K. Bail, the widow of the late George W. Bail, died last Saturday at her home on Walnut street, Newton Highlands. Mrs. Bail was born in South Hadley, Mass., and was 73 years of age. She graduated from Mount Holyoke College in 1855, and following her marriage to Mr.
Bail, who was one of the old Hawes school boys of Boston, in 1858, she resided in that city until they came to Newton Highlands in 1892. For many years Mrs. Bail was prominent in the work of the Associated Charities of Boston and was also interested in other philanthropic and charitable organizations of that city. Mrs.
Bail was a member of the Newton Highlands Congregational Church. She is survived by three sons and two daughters, Mr. William G. Bail of Dorchester, Mrs. H. E. Williams and Miss Katherine L. Bail of Newton Highlands, Dr. John W. Bail of Brookline and Mr. Henry W. Bail of West Newton. Funeral services were held from her late home on Tuesday afternoon in charge of Rev. George T.
Smart, D. D., of the Congregational Church. The interment was at Newton Cemetery.

FIRE AT OAK HILL.

A fire that was probably of incidinary origin destroyed a house in the Oak Hill section early Wednesday morning. The building is situated at 175 Brookline street, in an isolated section, and although it is furnished, the family of Edward M. Skinner, Jr., who owns the building, have not occupied it for some time. When the fire was discovered the flames were raging through the upper story. In response to an alarm from Box 9
the apparatus had a long, hard run, although the new automobile combination made good time. The building was gutted and the roof burned off.

LODGES.

Members of Division 35, A. O. H., formed Wednesday morning in Nonantum square, with their rifle and drum corps, and paraded to the Church of Our Lady, where they attended mass. Afterward a special car was taken Mr. Lowell, where they took part in the convention of the order being held in that city.

the largest and best equipped school in America. Its complete organization, its imposing Conservatory building, and splendid equipment, and the new Residence building offer exceptional facilities for students. Situated in Boston, the acknowledged music centre of America, it affords pupils the environment and atmosphere so necessary to a musical education.

Every department under special masters. The student's capacity sets
the only limitation to his progress. The reciprocal relations established with Harvard University affords pupils special advantages for literary study.

Owing to the practical training of students in our Normal Department,
